A Fearful Tragedy in Bristol, England—A Panic in a Theatre—Eighteen Persons Killed—The Alabama Claims—The Dalmatian Revolt—The Ecumenical Council.

BRISTOL, Dec. 28.—During a performance at the theatre in this city, last night, there was an alarm among the audience, and, in the effort of the crowd to escape from the building, eighteen persons were killed and many injured.

LONDON, Dec. 28.—The Times, considering the claims of the American Government against England, says that the case of the Alabama is the only plausible one presented, and, even there, the fault is due to the Union cruisers for permitting her escape. England, therefore, need not fear a resumption of negotiations, or a reference of the claims to an arbitration.... The Pacific Steam Navigation Company's steamer Arequipa, to ply between Panama and the cities of the west coast of South America, was successfully launched at Greenock this morning....Dispatches from Vienna confirm the previous reports of the entire suppression of the insurrection in Dalmatia....It is noted by the Press here, with approval, that the new Austro-Chinese treaty forbids Consuls to engage in trade.

ROME, Dec. 28.—It is certain that in the questions thus far submitted for the consideration of the Committees appointed by the Council, nothing is said on the subject of infallibility. The Pope expresses the opinion that members of the Council have no voice in the regulation of that body's proceedings.

Resignation of the French Ministry—A Letter from the Emperor—Personal Government at an End—Opening of the Regular Session of the Chambers.

PARIS, Dec. 28.—The Journal Officiel this morning announces the resignation of the Ministry and the Emperor's determination to accept the same. It contains, also, a letter from the Emperor to M. EMILE OLLIVIER, requesting him to name persons who will, associated with himself, form a homogenous Cabinet, faithfully representing the legislative majority, and resolved to apply, in letter and spirit, the Senatus Consultum of Sept. 8. The Emperor counts on the devotion of the Corps Legislatif to the great interests of the country, no less than on that of M. OLLIVIER to aid him in the task he has undertaken of putting into successful operation a constitutional régime. The liberal Paris journals commenting on the Emperor's letter to M. OLLIVIER, say that personal government is now at an end in France, and the letter is the first chapter of the liberal empire. The new session of the Corps Legislatif began to-day. M. SCHNEIDER was reelected President by a vote of 190 to 40....The trial of TRAUPMANN, for the murder of the KINCK family, began in this city to-day. The Court room was densely packed with spectators at the opening of the proceedings.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

MONTREAL, Dec. 28.—Judge COURSOL to-day decided that the evidence of forgery against CALDWELL was conclusively established, and ordered that he be committed for extradition, according to the terms of the treaty. CALDWELL'S counsel gave notice that they would appeal to a higher Court as to question of jurisdiction in the matter. This will delay if not prevent the extradition.

MEXICO.

Movements of Mr. Seward—Visits to Historic Localities—Pronunciamientos Against the Government.

CITY OF MEXICO, Dec. 20.—Mr. SEWARD and party left the capital on the 15th, and arrived at Puebla on the 18th. On the 19th they were at Tlascala visiting the historic remains for which that place is celebrated. On the 21st they visit the monuments of Cholula. They will go next to Orizaba, where they will arrive on the 23d. Minister NELSON accompanies the party on this excursion. Mr. SEWARD will sail from Vera Cruz for Havana, on the English steamer of Jan. 2. Several important pronunciamientos are reported. The Government troops have gained several victories over bands of malcontents, and the most formidable of these are taking to the mountains.

CUBA.

Holiday Amusements of the Spanish Authorities—Executions on Christmas Day—The Gunboats at Charleston, S. C.

HAVANA, Dec. 27.—The holidays are passing very tranquilly....JOSE CRESPILES and JOSE RUBO, convicted of attempting to incite a rebellion among the Catalan volunteers, were sentenced and garroted on Christmas Day.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Dec. 28.—The officers of the fleet of thirteen Spanish gunboats now anchored off the Battery were entertained at a collation to-day, given by the municipal authorities. The fleet will remain here for three or four days, and it is expected will make this port their rendezvous. The frigate Pizarro and three gunboats are expected to-night.

A Singular Case of Robbery—Confession of a County Official.

CHICAGO, ILL., Dec. 28.—The mystery of the recent robbery of the County Treasury of Tama County, Iowa, has been finally unraveled. It will be recollected that DENTON CAMERY, the Assistant Treasurer, asserted that he had been knocked down, stabbed and otherwise maltreated, and robbed of about $8,000. He has finally confessed that he committed the robbery himself, and has restored the money. Shortly after his confession CAMERY undertook to commit suicide by shooting himself in the bowels, inflicting a wound which may prove fatal.

Fatal Riot in Minnesota—Damages Against a Railroad Company.

CHICAGO, Dec. 28.—On Christmas Day a fight occurred at Morris Lake, Minn., on the Lake Superior Railroad, between a party of Swedes and Irish railroad laborers, which lasted about three hours. One of the Swedes, whose name is unknown, and JAMES BROWN, of Fond-du-Lac, Wis., were killed, and seven others seriously wounded, one of whom will die. About fifty men were engaged in the row....MICHAEL DUGMAN has obtained judgment against the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad for $10,000, for injuries received while in its employment.

WASHINGTON.

The Mexican Claims Commission—Cuban Policy of the Administration—The New-York Post Office Building Investigation—The Exposition of 1871.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.—The statement has been published that the Mexican Commission now in session in this city has virtually decided that it has no jurisdiction over franchises purchased by American citizens of the Mexican Government. It will interest a large number of people to know that no such decision has been rendered, and that, in fact, no such question has yet been raised before the Commission. All that the Commission has done thus far is to decide questions of practice, and not a single legal point has yet been ruled upon.

OUR CUBAN POLICY.

One of your contemporaries has within the last few days given publicity to a statement that the Administration would soon change its Cuban policy, and that the President, Mr. FISH and Senator SUMNER had experienced a change of mind on this subject. The advisability of speedily recognising the Cubans as belligerents was, it was asserted, under consideration, in deference to the manifest desire of the people of the country, and in order to ward off unfavorable comment and criticism in Congress. In reply to this revelation, which, by the way, has created some excitement among the Cuban sympathizers here, General LOGAN, who called on the President to-day and had a conversation on the subject, says that so far as he can judge there is not a word of truth in it. General LOGAN went to the President for the special purpose of urging the cause of Cuba, but failed to receive any assurance whatever that the Executive intended to take a new departure. As repeatedly stated in these dispatches, the President, Secretary FISH and Mr. SUMNER have the warmest sympathy for the Cubans and wish all success to the revolution, but they are of the opinion that the time has not yet come when they can officially and conscientiously recommend or advise the taking of so important a step as the acknowledgement of the belligerent rights of the insurgents. The Cubans have it in their own hands to obtain the coveted belligerent rights concession at any time, but they must first comply with the necessary international conditions and requirements which are too well known to require mention here.

THE NEW-YORK POST OFFICE BUILDING.

The House Post Office Committee has transferred the scene of its operations to your City, and will to-morrow renew its investigations at the Astor House. A meeting will take place to-morrow morning, when it is expected some of the contractors will be given an opportunity to vent their spleen on Mr. MULLETT.

THE FOREIGN MAIL SERVICE.

Postmaster-General CRESWELL and JOSEPH H. BLACKFAN, Esq., Superintendent of Foreign Mails, left for New-York this morning for the purpose of conferring with Postmaster JONES in regard to what measures shall be taken for meeting the exigency caused by the refusal of the ocean steamship companies to carry the foreign mails under the new treaty.

THE WASHINGTON EXHIBITION.

In order to remove a misapprehension which seems to exist in some minds, it is proper to state that the bill now before Congress in regard to the proposed International Exhibition does not ask for any appropriation. It is simply an act of incorporation necessary for the organization of the Company in this district, where Congress has exclusive jurisdiction. The citizens of Washington have already made a bona fide subscription of $600,000, and have asked Congress for authority to levy a tax of $500,000 more. Men of capital stand ready to erect the requisite structures on this basis, with a lien on the receipts for reimbursement to the extent of $1,500,000 more, which would make a total expenditure of $2,500,000, or about the total gross cost of the Paris Exposition. For this latter object Congress appropriated $100,000 in gold for the benefit of individual inventors. It has not been asked to appropriate anything for the proposed Exhibition here, but how it can refuse to do so, if the Exhibition proves worthy of the country, it is difficult to see, in view of this contribution to the French Exposition.

THE RED RIVER REVOLT.

Governor McDougall's Family at St. Paul—The Governor About to Return to Canada—The Reported Fillibuster Movement.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Dec. 28.—The family of Governor MCDOUGALL arrived here to-day from the north. They left Pembina last Saturday, and will await the arrival of Governor MCDOUGALL, who is expected to reach St. Paul next Friday en route to Canada. They deny the reports that Governor MCDOUGALL had anything to do with arming the Indians or inciting them to rise. They believe the mass of the inhabitants at first favored Mr. MCDOUGALL; that they were deceived, and controlled by a few designing leaders, who misrepresented Mr. MCDOUGALL'S mission and won them over. The St. Paul Dispatch, commenting on the Red River news received from New-York to-day, says that the report that squads of fillibusters are to be passed over the railroads within 200 miles of the British border is a fabrication, as the nearest railroad point is 400 miles from the border, and a forced march, with the ground covered with snow and the mercury from 10 to 30 degrees below zero, is not probable. The Winnebagoes are advised not to rely upon any material aid from such expeditions, as they may exist only on paper.

THE WEST.

A World's Fair at St. Louis in 1871—A Million Dollars to be Raised—Chinese Labor—A Steamboat Sunk at Louisville.

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 28.—A meeting was held last night by the Committee recently appointed to consider the project of holding a World's Fair here in 1871. After considerable discussion of the various plans, it was finally resolved that the holding of such fair was not only feasible but practicable and desirable. A committee was appointed to draft articles of incorporation for a World's Fair Association, with a capital stock of $1,000,000, to be submitted to a mass meeting, to be held at the Southern Hotel, Jan. 30, at which the inauguration and perfection of the arrangements for holding such fair will be made....Nearly 500 Chinese, from California, will arrive here to-night. They will immediately proceed to Texas to work on railroads.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Dec. 28.—The Madison packet Leonora, No. 2, while making a landing last night, ran into the wheelhouse of the steamer Mary Houston, stove in her bow and sank in ten feet of water. She can be easily raised. The Houston is only slightly damaged.

Double Murder in Tennessee.

MEMPHIS, Dec. 28.—On Thursday night STEVE BENNETT and TOM JUDSON (colored) had an altercation at Bell's Station, on the Memphis and Louisville Railroad, during which the former was brutally murdered. Last night a party took JUDSON from the custody of the Constable, carried him to the woods and shot him.

The Hudson River—Dangerous Crossing at Albany—Vessels Carried Away by Ice at Hudson.

ALBANY, Dec. 28.—The rain and thaw of the past two days have weakened the ice, and made it dangerous even for pedestrians. The Boston ferry boat began running yesterday, and is making regular trips.

HUDSON, Dec. 28.—The rain last night caused the ice in front of this city to move out, carrying with it a large number of vessels anchored here. At least fifty light craft were carried down stream. The boats and vessels at the docks were in great danger during the day from the moving ice and dense fog.

The steamers Norwich and Samuel Cornell left Rondout this afternoon for this city, and there is no ice in the river to obstruct their passage.

Miscellaneous Telegrams.

G. DEVRIES, a well-known dealer in foreign books and pictures, died at his residence in this city, to-day.

AUGUSTA, Ga., Dec. 28.—A serious riot occurred yesterday at Dearing, Columbia County, in which A. N. HODO and ELLIS ADAMS were killed, and DYAH HODO was wounded. Whisky was the cause, politics having nothing whatever to do with the affair.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 28.—Rev. Father DUNN, of St. John's Catholic Church, died this morning in the 61st year of his age. He was pastor of St. Philip de Neri Church, at Southwark, during the Native American riots of 1844.

EUROPEAN NEWS BY MAIL.

ARRIVAL OF THE STEAMSHIP AMERICA.

The steamship America which left Bremen Dec. 11, and Southampton Dec. 14, reached the Lower Bay late Monday night. By her mails, received yesterday morning, two days' later advices are at hand.

A dispatch from Caprera in the Florence Diritto states that General GARIBALDI is now completely restored to health.

From the Cape comes news of a violent gale lasting four days, and causing, it is said, great destruction of life and property. The gale was accompanied by heavy rain, which also did much damage.

MGR. JACQUEMET, Bishop of Nantes, expired in his palace Dec. 10. The deceased was in 1848 Grand Vicar of MGR. AFFRE, Archbishop of Paris, and accompanied him to the barricade where the latter was killed; he himself nearly fell a victim to his devotedness, as a ball went through his hat. The deceased prelate was in his sixty-sixth year.

A report of M. MAGNE, the Minister of Finance in France, had been published in the Journal Officiel. It represents the finances as in a very flourishing condition. The floating debt has been greatly reduced, there is a surplus on the budget of 1868, and also on that of 1869, and an estimated surplus for 1871. For the first time after a long interval M. MAGNE says the expenditure for public work will be defrayed from the ordinary revenue.

An open air demonstration in opposition to the Ecumenical Council, and in honor of SAVONAROLA had taken place in Florence. The proceedings were marred by very unfavorable weather, heavy rain falling all the time, and the attendance was but scanty—about three hundred persons in all. Father GAVAZZI was among the speakers who took part in the demonstration, and his attacks upon the Papacy were received with a good deal of cheering. The demonstration seems to have passed off very quietly.

The Peuple Francais, which is considered as to some extent an organ of the Tuileries, makes the announcement that in future the Empress of the French will not attend any Ministerial Councils. Her Majesty's alleged participation in political matters has, it will be remembered, recently formed the subject of remark in the Paris papers. The Rappel even goes so far as to intimate that the Press prosecutions which the Imperial Government have just set on foot have been due to the influence of the Empress.

A communication from Ragusa states that, in consequence of the difficulties arising from the Winter season, the military operations are suspended for the moment in the northern part of the district of Cattaro. The Imperial troops occupy Risano and the surrounding heights, which are guarded by three battalions. Fort Dragal is well provisioned and armed with cannon. In the South the principal points are held by Austrian garrisons, which communicate with Budua and Cattaro. No disorders have occurred in the neighborhood of Ragusa.

M. LOUIS BLANC'S first contribution to the Rappel is entitled "England, the Accomplice of the Empire." Posterity, M. LOUIS BLANC thinks, will have some difficulty in believing that in the middle of the nineteenth century a Bonapartist party existed in this country. He reproaches England for being the first among European nations to throw the mantle of its alliance over the horrors of the coup d'état, and to take LOUIS NAPOLEON by the hand, and introduce him into the circle of crowned heads. The Emperor NAPOLEON, he says, quoting Mr. KINGLAKE, entered upon the Crimean war in order to give himself a social position in the world, and it was free England which aided him to accomplish his object. That war, M. LOUIS BLANC maintains, was as disastrous to us as it was advantageous to "our august ally." Nay more, since the establishment of the Empire we have been incessantly increasing our armaments, fortifying our coasts, and inventing fresh engines of destruction, knowing that it depended only upon the caprice of one man to plunge the world in flames. This is the Nemesis, according to M. LOUIS BLANC, which has overtaken us for supporting a despot.

M. HENRI ROCHEFORT had just addressed the following letter to the independent thinkers of Lyons:

"CITIZENS: If religions, of whatever nature they may be, and whencesoever they may come, did not constitute a permanent outrage on all liberty and progress, tyrants would be less eager to restore those auxiliaries of absolutism as soon as they seized on power. We have sufficient shackles and chains on our feet in private and political life without forging others for our minds and ideas. The first duty of a nation which desires to be free—and when shall we obtain liberty if not at present?—is to cast off that restraint called a religion, and which leads fatally to slavery, when it does not conduct to madness. I congratulate you, therefore, with all my heart, citizens, on having had the happy idea of opposing to the processions and grimaces of our enemies the only communion we wish to employ, which is that of Republican convictions and sentiments of fraternity. I clasp the hands of all the independent thinkers of the great City of Lyons.

GEORGE PEABODY.

Embarkation of the Remains at Portsmouth, England—Remarks of Minister Motley—Letters from Victor Hugo and Louis Blanc.

On Saturday, Dec, 11, the remains of Mr. PEABODY were placed on board the Monarch at Portsmouth. The special train conveying the body and the friends of the deceased from London (which had been provided free of expense by the London and Southwestern Railway Company as a testimony of their respect for the character and virtues of the late Mr. PEABODY) was appointed to arrive in the dockyard at 3 P. M., and precisely at that time a gun fired from Her Majesty's ship Excellent, answered by another from the Monarch's bow battery, and the sharp blasts of the bugles along the lines of the marines and seamen, announced the arrival of the funeral train within the dockyard, the Monarch and all other of Her Majesty's ships in harbor at the same moment dipping the British ensign at their peaks to "half mast," and displaying the American ensign flying dipped to abreast their foretopmast crosstrees, the United States corvette Plymouth also lowering her ensign from her peak. The guns of the Duke of Wellington took up the firing at minute intervals, and, amid their sombre booming, with the wind, now increased to a fresh gale, "soughing" through the Monarch's rigging, and the rain falling heavily, the train rolled slowly in, and drew up on the edge of the jetty. What now remained to be done was the work of but a few minutes. The black cloth-covered case containing the coffin having been removed from the railway car, was borne to the ship, followed by the relative and friends of the deceased who had accompanied it from London—Hon. Mr. MOTLEY, United States Minister in this country; Mr. PEABODY RUSSEL; Sir CURTIS LAMPSON and Mr. CHAS. REED, M. P., executors to the will of the deceased; Mr. J. S. MORGAN and Mr. SOMERBY. Behind the immediate mourners came Admirals Sir JAMES HOPE and A. C. KEY, Captain HANCOCK, and a number of American and English officers. The coffin, on reaching the deck of the Monarch, was received by the chaplain of the ship, and a few moments afterward was reverently deposited on the bier in the pavillion on the quarter deck, in official charge of Captain COMMERELL. Then followed a very brief interval, during which a few words were exchanged between the American Minister, Mr. PEABODY RUSSEL, with their friends, and Captain COMMERELL.

LETTERS TO AMERICA.

The following letters were directed to the American Committee in London by Messrs. VICTOR HUGO and LOUIS BLANC:

VICTOR HUGO'S LETTER TRANSLATED.

HAUTEVILLE HOUSE, Dec. 2.

SIR: Your letter reaches me to day, Dec. 2. I thank you for it. It tears me from the recollection of this day. I forget the Empire, and think of America. I was turned toward darkness; I turn toward light.

You ask of me a word for GEORGE PEABODY. In your sympathetic illusion you regard me as that which I am not—as a voice of France. I am, as I have said, but a voice from exile. But it matters little, Sir; a noble appeal such as yours must be heard. Unimportant as I am, I ought to, and do, respond to it.

Yes, America is right to be proud of this great citizen of the world, of GEORGE PEABODY. PEABODY was a happy man who suffered by all suffering; a rich man who felt the cold, the hunger and the thirst of the poor. Having a place near unto ROTHSCHILD, he found means to change it into a place near to Vincent de Paul. Like Jesus Christ, he had a wound in his side; that wound was the misery of others; it was not blood that flowed from it, but gold, gold from a heart. (O'était de l'or, or qui sortait d' un coeur.)

On this earth are men of hatred and men of love; PEABODY was of the latter. On the face of such men we behold the smile of God. What law do they obey? One only, the law of Fraternity—the divine, the human law, which regulates aid by distress, which gives precepts in this case and millions in that, and throughout the centuries of our darkness leaves a train of light, extending from Jesus poor to PEABODY rich.

Let PEABODY return amid you blessed by us! Our world envies your possession. His land will keep his ashes, and our hearts his memory. Let the impressed immensity of the sea bear him unto you. The free flag of America will never unfold stars enough over his coffin.

One comparison I cannot avoid making: This day ten years ago, on Dec. 2, 1859, I, a solitary supplicant, addressed a prayer to the illustrious American nation in behalf of the condemned of Harper's Ferry; now 'tis a glorification I send to it. Since 1859, great events have occurred; slavery has been stricken down; let us hope that misery, a twin slavery, will be abolished, too, some day; and, the world over, and until this second progress completes the first, let us venerate its two apostles, coupling in one thought of gratitude and respect, JOHN BROWN, the friend of the slave, to GEORGE PEABODY, the friend of the poor. I press your hand, Sir.

VICTOR HUGO.

Colonel BERTON, Chairman American Committee.

LOUIS BLANC'S LETTER, WRITTEN IN ENGLISH.

LONDON, Dec. 9, 1869.

SIR: The death of so [illegible] a man as GEORGE PEABODY proved himself to be is a public calamity in which the whole civilized world ought to share. I feel, therefore, in duty bound to express, in answer to your appeal, how deeply I mourn, as a Frenchman and as a man, for the illustrious American whose life was of such value to the most needy of his fellow men.

It was but natural that in a country like this, where so much is thought of long lineage and station in life, GEORGE PEABODY should receive, as the only fit token of public gratitude, the same kind of respect which is paid to Kings, Princes and men of noble birth as well as men of noble deeds, and that his mortal remains should be commited to a temporary resting place beneath the nave of Westminster Abbey, to be sent afterward in a ship-of-war to his native land—the land of freedom. Nor is there anything to complain of in this national mode of testifying the high estimation in which the British nation held the eminent philanthropist. Yet, I cannot help lamenting that there should be for men of that stamp no particular sort of homage better calculated to show how little, compared to them, are most of kings, princes, noblemen, renowned diplomatists, world-famed conquerors. It was not the kind-hearted Republican trader, who was honored by the fact of being consigned to rest in Westminster Abbey, but rather those who were considered to be worthy of sleeping there their last sleep, on account of their rank, not of their virtue.

The number of mourners assembled within the precincts of the sacred edifice, their silent sorrow, the tears shed by so many, and, in several parts of London, the readiness of the shopkeepers to give expression to their grief by closing their shops and lowering their blinds—these were the homages really in keeping with the affectionate admiration due to one whose title, in history, will be this—the highest a rich man can aspire to—the friend of the poor. I am, Sir, obediently yours,

LOUIS BLANC.

Colonel BERTON, Chairman American Committee.

CHURCH OF ROME.

Formal Opening of the Ecumenical Council—Religious Ceremonies and Accompanying Incidents—The Inaugural Allocution.

Rome (Dec. 9) Correspondence Daily News.

It must be admitted that, weak as is the temporal power of the Pope, no other Prince could have assembled such a body as met yesterday in the council hall of St. Peter's, and no other could have provided them with such a magnificent temple. There are twenty-two Bishops from Ireland, about sixteen from England, and no fewer than fifty-two from the United States of America. Altogether there are but sixty-three dioceses in the United States, and four of these are vacant, so that it may, without much exaggeration, be said that the whole Roman Catholic Episcopacy of the United States have obeyed the Pope's mandate. The Canadian, and other colonial Bishops, have also come over in great numbers. How many have come from Australia I am not able to say. France and Spain have contributed largely, but the Italian Bishops, of whom there are 300, form the majority of the members of the Council. Night before last the city was illuminated, and everything gave promise of an auspicious morning when the Romans went to bed. When they awoke, however, which they did at the early hour of five or soon after, rain was falling in torrents. The streets were some of them flooded, and a passage to St. Peter's was all but impracticable by some routes except by carriages, which were in immense demand. The Bishops were to meet at 8:30 o'clock in a meeting hall, where they were to robe and form in procession, entering by the great door beneath the portico. It was nearly, if not quite, 9:30, however, before the procession moved. The fact was announced by the discharge of cannon from the Castle of St. Angelo. A file of priests in their albs formed the first line. These, I apprehend, were the clergy connected with the Church. At some distance behind these was a line of Papal Zouaves; and then the general public. The strains of the hymn, "Veni, Creator Spiritus," announced that the head of the procession had entered the church, and the Pontifical Crucifix, preceded by the singers and the Pope's Prelates in their appropriate robes, was seen in the distance. Then followed the Abbots, Bishops, Archbishops, Primates, Patriarchs and Cardinals, the Senator, with the Conservators of Rome, the Vice-Chamberlain, and then the Pope himself, followed by the Generals of the Congregations and regular Orders, and the officials of the Council. The members of the Council walked in pairs, having on each side a clergyman, who may be regarded as their assessors or theologians. I think the procession occupied an hour, or near it. For the most part, the Bishops, &c., were dressed in white watered silk with a gold fringe, but in some half-dozen cases the shade was varied by blue or pink, or an intermixture of different colors. It was in the case of the Eastern Bishops that the color seemed to be varied. They presented the most various types. Some were men of commanding presence, tall, handsome, and prepossessing. Others, on the contrary, were so diminutive that they could scarcely be recognized in the procession. Most were without beards, but a few, and they also seemed to be from the East, wore hairy appendages of enormous proportions. I should say that seven-tenths had their hair silvered by years. On the whole, they seemed a venerable and thoughtful body of men. The Pope himself looked the same benign, kind and affable man which his photographs represent. Some knelt while he was passing. The hymn, "Veni, Creator Spiritus," was sung at intervals during the procession. The first verse and the conclusion were omitted till the Pope came to the chief altar, on which the Sacrament was exposed.

RELIGIOUS CEREMONIES.

The religious ceremony preceding the opening of the Council now began. His Holiness having invoked the protection of God and the presence of the Holy Spirit, offered a prayer. The members of the Council then proceeded to the Council Hall, and occupied their respective seats—His Holiness making confession to the Cardinal-Deacon of the Holy College, who was to celebrate the mass of the Immaculate Conception, with the addition of the prayer "De Sancto Scripto." When the mass proper was over, the sermon having been delivered, not at the usual time, but near the end of the ceremony, the Pope took his seat, and was dressed in the Pontifical vestments, as though he were about to say mass. The members of the Council then, one by one, each carrying his mitre in his hand, made their obeisance; the Cardinals kissing the Pope's hand, the Patriarchs, Archbishops and Bishops his right knee, and the Abbots his foot. His Holiness then rising, while all the others knelt down, made another prayer, to which the prelates answered "Amen." After the chanting of the Litany and some other prayers, in which the presence and aid of the Holy Spirit were asked for, the Prefect of the Ceremonies cried out in a loud voice, "Exeant omnes locum non habentes in Concilio"—that is to say, Let all who have no right to be here retire.

THE PRELIMINARY MEETING.

It is not at all surprising after the fatigue of yesterday that this should be a comparative day of rest. When it is stated that most of the Fathers rose as early as 5 o'clock yesterday morning, that they had to say mass, to prepare for the preliminary meeting, to attend the long religious service that preceded the opening of the Council, and that the Council did not break up till about 3 o'clock, and when it is added that many of the Bishops are very old, and some very infirm, the interposition of a day of rest was almost indispensable. The meeting of yesterday was, as I conjectured, one of form. The only questions submitted to the Fathers were whether the Council should be declared to be now opened, or whether that declaration should be postponed till the Epiphany. A translation of the allocution which the Pope addressed to the Council is as follows. I understand that at some parts of it the Pontiff was moved even to tears:

THE ALLOCUTION.

VENERABLE BRETHREN: What we asked of God by many supplications and prayers—that we may be able to inaugurate the Ecumenical Council appointed by us—this has been granted, to our great joy, by the remarkable and singular grace of God. Our heart, therefore, exults in the Lord, and is suffused with inconceivable consolation, because on this most auspicious anniversary of the festival of the Immaculate Conception of the Virgin Mary, Mother of God, you have been called to participate in our solicitude have assembled in greater numbers than formerly in this citadel of the Catholic religion, and we thoroughly rejoice in your presence. Now, venerable brethren, you are assembled here in the name of Christ, that with us you may bear testimony to the Word of God and Jesus Christ, that you may teach the way of God in truth to all men with us, and that you may judge with us, under the guidance of the Holy Ghost, of the opposition of science, falsely so called. For if ever there was a time when zeal for the Divine glory and the salvation of the Lord's flock demanded of us to surround and defend Sion, it is now. For you see, venerable brethren, with what violence the old enemy of the human race has attacked, and still attacks, the House of God. Under His guidance that wicked conspiracy of the impious is widely diffused. Strong in union, powerful in wealth, protected by institutions, and wearing the liberal veil of malice, and full of weakness, it does not cease its most bitter war against the sacred Church of Christ. You know the nature of that war—its power, its arms, its progress, its councils. You have continually before your eyes, the trouble and confusion, the grievous perversion of all right, the various arts of lying and deception by which the wholesome bonds of justice, integrity and authority are loosened, the worst passions are inflamed, the Christian faith rooted out from souls, so that the end of God's Church might well be feared now, if it were possible for it to be destroyed by any machinations or endeavors of man. But, as St. John Chrysostom said, "nothing is more powerful than the Church—the Church is stronger [illegible]—Heaven itself" and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass." What words? "Thou art Peter, and on this rock shall I build my Church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it."

His Holiness, in conclusion, hopes for peace among nations, laws among barbarians, quiet in monasteries, order in the churches, and discipline among the clergy, as the result of the deliberations of the Council. Conscious of his own weakness, he invokes the presence and aid of the Holy Spirit, the prayers of the Mother of God, and of the angels and archangels, and the Prince of the Apostles, and all the saints. I should have mentioned that there were present at the Council yesterday the Empress Eugenie, the Queen of Wirtemburg, FRANCIS II., (ex-King of Naples,) the ex-Duke of Parma, &c.

SUEZ.

Fresh Facts About the Canal.

Mr. C. CLARKE, President of the Liverpool Chamber of Commerce, read a paper there Dec. 13 on the "Suez Canal," from which he has just returned. Mr. CLARKE'S conclusions are that, as regards the siting at Port Said, it may be necessary either to fill up permanently the interstices between the blocks which form the western breakwater, or dredge away the bank as it is formed. Either course is practicable, and might be taken at a moderate expense. With respect to the injury of the banks by wash, it may be necessary, in several portions of the canal, to reduce the slope of the banks, and to pitch them with stone to a height of two or three feet above the water line. This is already being done between Suez and the Bitter Lakes. There are inexhaustible supplies of stone in the mountains near Suez, and now that the canal is open, the cost of transport would be trifling. The fear of the canal drying up by evaporation Mr. CLARKE regards as chimerical. No man who saw the Bitter Lakes and the current flowing in from the Red Sea could entertain such a notion. The filling of the canal by shifting sands is a real danger, though greatly exaggerated. Of the hundred miles which form the entire length of the canal, about fifty-seven miles are made through lakes which have existed as natural basins for at least 2,000 years without being filled with sand. Of the remaining forty-three miles the greater part consists of a mixture of sand and gravel, in consistency resembling more a garden walk than the fine loose material which is popularly supposed to form the desert. Mr. CLARKE has no doubt whatever that the enormous machines which were ranged along the bank of the canal as he passed will speedily cut in a month all the sand which is likely to be blown in in a year. As regards the cost of maintaining the canal when completed, an eminent English engineer on board estimated it at £60,000 per annum. Mr. CLARKE would have thought at least £100,000 would be required; but he was told that Mr. LAVALLEE was willing to contract for its maintenance at £40,000 a year. Finally, as regards the prospects of the canal as a paying investment, Mr. CLARKE confesses himself unable as yet to arrive at a satisfactory opinion.

An Offical Report.

An official report on the Suez Canal having been made by Commander G. S. NARES, of her Majesty's surveying vessel, Newport, which passed through at the opening, the Hydrographer to the Admiralty has issued a series of directions for the navigation of the Canal. There is no doubt, it is stated, that every vessel will no more or less damage to the banks on passing, but screw-ships going five or six knots will do but little harm. Large vessels should go at slower speed than small ones. Several ships grounded on the passage, but this was caused more by their desire to get through quickly than from any fault in the Canal.

AUSTRIA.

The Austrian Reichsrath was opened on Dec. 13. His Majesty, in his speech from the throne, spoke as follows:

HONORED GENTLEMEN OF BOTH HOUSES OF THE REICHSRATH: In assembling you again around me to-day, I bid you all heartily welcome. I do so with the satisfaction which the retrospect of your successful activity, animated by a patriotic spirit, during the past session affords, and with the confidence to which you have acquired a just claim by your successful labors. The Empire intrusted to my guardianship by Providence has undeniably undergone in all directions a progressive development on the basis of constitutional institutions. But much as the appreciating judgment of discerning statesmen at home and abroad on the progress of this development is calculated to strengthen our courage and our confidence in the fulfillment of a great duty, equally great are the tasks which remain for us to accomplish. The putting into operation of the Army Reorganization law has, in one portion of the Empire, caused the population to assume an attitude of armed opposition, and has compelled us to employ exceptional measures, respecting which, however, my Government will lay before you a bill as required by the Constitution. Most deeply do I deplore the aberration which has rendered this measure necessary, and, with the hope that it will soon be brought to an end, I have directed my Government to mitigate as much as possible the evil results arising therefrom, so soon as law and order shall have been restored. You will have manifold occasions to carry forward the work of legislation, and to deal with a series of measures affecting the most important branches of jurisprudence and administration (some of which were laid before you during the past, and others which will be presented to you in the ensuing session) in the same spirit of progress and of moderation and foresight into the peculiar circumstances and politico-economical requirements of the Empire which has hitherto marked your steps on the path of legislation. It is, however, necessary not alone to pass laws, but also, based as they are upon the Constitution itself, to obtain for them that general and actual recognition which, to my great regret, has not been accorded to them in many quarters. If experience has shown that alterations of the Constitution are desirable, the way to effect them is to be found in the Constitution itself. Most of the representative assemblies of my Kingdoms and countries have occupied themselves with questions respecting elections to the Reichsrath; and my Government will make a communication to the Reichsrath on this subject, and place it in a position to pass such measures as come within the range of its competency. If the desired unanimity be attained on this important matter, the solution of all other questions appertaining to the Constitution may be anticipated with so much the more confidence. But, though the form of the Constitution may afford the freest opportunity for the realization of all kinds of views and desires in reference to its further development, there certainly are, nevertheless, limits drawn in more than one direction by the very nature of the Empire itself. The Constitution was not framed without the most careful consideration of the special circumstances of the kingdoms and countries, and their just claim to regulate those circumstances in an independent manner. I trust that the intention to confine this claim within narrower limits than are required for the maintenance of the power of the Empire at home and abroad will not come and stand in the way of the general wish for a good understanding. On the other hand, I have no apprehension of its intentionally happening that these limits should be permanently extended to the detriment and danger of the Empire. I am sure that all my people are convinced, with me, that the fame of an honorable past is only revived by the clear realization of the present—the present misunderstood—but too easily casts a gloom over the past. In this respect also I derive most confident hopes from that patriotism on which, in times of crisis, have never relied in vain. I derive them from the consideration that this patriotism, in faithfully holding fast to the conviction that the welfare of the whole Empire is necessary to the real interests of the different kingdoms and countries, must and certainly will bring about the union of conflicting views. Great will be my joy if these my expectations are fulfilled, and if my intentions, which are guided by a sincere love for all my peoples, should coincide with your accurate discernment as regards your own interests, and your equally strong feeling of duty toward upholding the welfare and glory of the Empire. Honored gentlemen, it has been a pleasure to me to greet you on my return from a long journey which I have lately undertaken in countries with which we are specially destined to keep up an active and increasing intercourse. It is with satisfaction I inform you that everywhere I have met with the warmest sympathy for our fatherland and its future. For this, when proposing the inauguration of a work which does honor to the enterprising spirit and perseverance of its author, a work which promises in its development to open up a new field to our trade and manufactures, for that progressive and creative commercial activity the furtherance of which I recommend to your most earnest consideration. This is a task which will be all the more qualified may give their undisturbed attention, since they are summoned thereto most unequivocally by the peaceful situation abroad. Our relations on all sides, even when passing appearances seem to cloud the horizon, have now assumed a friendly and peaceful aspect. Supported by these peaceful circumstances, I look forward to the future with a strong heart, and expect, honored gentlemen, that a similar sentiment will animate you in your labors and bring them to a happy termination."

THE ANNUAL REPORTS.

AN INTERESTING EXHIBIT

The Herculean Labors of the Commissioners—All About the Excise Board—What will Become of the Law—Work of the Fire Commissioners—Probabilities of a Change.

In addition to the annual report of the Superintendent of Buildings, and the synopsis of the report of the Metropolitan Health Board, which were published in the TIMES of yesterday, exclusively, we present all the material facts which will be contained in the forthcoming reports of the Commissioners of Emigration, the Metropolitan Excise Board, and the Board of Fire Commissioners.

The Commissioners of Emigration.

The object of this most valuable of the invaluable institutions of the City of New-York is, as the public are generally aware, the care and protection of emigrants from the period of their arrival at this port until the expiration of the period during which the State is chargeable for their maintenance in case the emigrants are unable to maintain themselves The Commissioners of Emigration are, in addition to their regular duties, custodians of the fund which is created by tax or head money upon every emigrant brought to our shores. This fund pays all the expenses of maintenance, and the institution is, therefore, self-sustaining.

IN CASTLE GARDEN.

Castle Garden, whose walls once resounded with the shouts of soldiery during the Revolution, and later with the notes of song and sweet music during its occupancy by opera troupes, and wherein the "Swedish Nightingale" thrilled admiring audiences—this building is the landing place of all emigrant passengers arriving at the port of New-York. Into its capacious apartments are emptied the living freight which comes to add to our population, to occupy our immense Western prairies, and in the majority of instances to bring wealth, or the means of producing it, to our vast country.

On the arrival at Quarantine of every vessel bringing emigrants, the ship is visited by an officer of the boarding department, who ascertains the number of passengers, the deaths, if any, during the voyage, the amount and character of the sickness and the condition of the vessel in respect to cleanliness. Complaints are also received of the treatment the emigrants have experienced during the voyage, and these facts are reported to the General Agent and Superintendent, at his office in Castle Garden. The vessel proceeds on her course up the bay—unless she arrives at a season of the year or from such a port as subjects her to Quarantine—and anchors convenient to the landing depot, and the passengers are then transferred to the care of the landing department. After an examination of the luggage of the passengers by the customs officer, the baggage is checked and the emigrants are transferred to the depot provided at the Castle Garden pier. They are then examined by a medical officer to discover if any sick have escaped the attention of the Health Officer at Quarantine, and if so, these are transferred to the hospitals at Ward's and Blackwell's Islands. This medical officer also selects all subjects for special wards, such as the blind, crippled or lunatics and any others who are likely to become a future charge. This done, the emigrants are conducted to the Rotunda, where are separate apartments for the various nationalities. Any one can imagine that herein would be a babel of tongues when the immense apartment is well filled with emigrants; but interpreters are on hand to attend to their wants, and posted about the room are placards in the various languages, so that all who read may run and obtain the information they desire.

FURTHER INQUIRIES.

In these compartments the emigrants are summoned to the desk where the names, nationality, former place of residence and other particulars are recorded. Those who desire to depart immediately for their destination are directed to the agents of the railroad companies in the building where they can procure tickets without the risk of extortion. These are then transported to the depots of the various lines. Those who desire to remain in the City have their baggage sent to the express offices in the building, when the work of transportation is performed for a reasonable charge. Those having gold or silver for exchange into currency can effect the transfer in the building. Those who have friends expecting their arrival are afforded the facilities for correspondence by clerks who are familiar with the Continental languages. The destitute are provided with quarters on Ward's Island, where, also, the sick are sent. Thus it will be seen that every care is taken of the emigrant on arrival in the country.

THE LABOR EXCHANGE.

This is one of the modern institutions of this Commission, and its efficacy in procuring employment for the emigrant is highly extolled in their report. By it the inchoate citizen, who comes here seeking a home, is enabled to obtain employment wherever his services may be in demand whether in the West or South or elsewhere. The Labor Exchange is free of charge to emigrants desirous of finding employment in the City or elsewhere, and it undertakes to supply all kinds of skilled mechanical and agricultural labor to employers in any part of the States, the expense of transportation being defrayed by the employer. The Commissioners refer to the operations of this Bureau during the past year with satisfaction.

In order that the increase in the business of this Bureau may be shown, we present a comparative statement exhibiting the points to which emigrants were sent, in response to demands for their labor through the Labor Exchange, during the years 1868 and 1869.

As will be seen by the above the States of New-York, New-Jersey, Connecticut, and Pennsylvania furnished employment to more emigrants than all the others in both years. The demand for labor at the South has been very slight, though four new fields have been opened this year—viz.: the four last-mentioned States. It is very probable, however, that direct emigration to the South has been the cause the present year, and therefore, as the emigrants to not apply at this port, their destination is not shown.

THE ARRIVALS

of alien passengers during the year have been greater than in 1868, aggregating 254,837. Just now emigration is not brisk, and indeed it seldom is during this period of the year. The nativity of the majority of the passengers is shown by the following comparative table:

Country.	1868.	1869.
Germany	101,989	96,841

THE SOLE AGENCIES IN EUROPE.

These have been a source of great annoyance to the Commissioners of Emigration since their establishment, and were the cause of the most cruel swindles on emigrants. Happily, through the efforts of the Commissioners during the present year, these have been broken up, the railroad companies withdrawing their powers of attorney. At one time there were 600 such agencies in Europe. For the past three years it is estimated that more than $100,000 have been wrongfully obtained from emigrants at those agencies. The practice was to charge them a greater price for their passage tickets and railroad fares, on this side, than was proper, and oftentimes the emigrants were swindled by the exchange of gold into currency. In the report of last year, the total amount of overcharges was stated at $8,564 93, and the amount recovered through the Commissioners was $6,434 74. This year the first amount will be greatly reduced, and it is presumed that the swindling agencies will not again be tolerated.

THE HORRORS OF THE PASSAGE.

Last year the Commissioners of Emigration procured the passage of a law which would enable them to conduct examinations into charges of ill treatment of passengers at sea, and file the same with the County Clerk for use the same as oral testimony. When the case of the James Foster, the emigrant ship which arrived March 7, and on board which the most horrible cruelties were prepetrated, was brought to the notice of the Commissioners, a rigid examination was made, the testimony filed and suits are now in progress arising out of these cases. Since the James Foster affair no charge of cruel treatment has been presented to the Board. The Commissioners are now engaged in aiding the passage of an international law between this country and European countries which shall provide for the prompt and severe punishment of all cases of cruelty to passengers, and also shall make provision for the better treatment of emigrants, enabling them to have better ventilation, food and accommodations, which will be conducive to morality. The Commissioners express the belief that such a law will of incalculable benefit to the emigrant, and that it will certainly pass during the coming year.

The commutation fund last year reached $638,490 50, and this year will exceed $650,000. This fund is obtained from the tax upon each passenger, which is paid by the owner of the vessel, and which is a security that the emigrant shall not within a certain period become a charge upon the State. Additions are also made to the fund by penalties imposed for violations of the law and from other sources.

The above will be found a very valuable and instructive table, showing as it does how the population of the various States is partially made up by emigration, and which are the favorite localities.

SICKNESS.

The Commissioners refer to the fact that there has been little sickness of a serious character among the emigrants during the year. At the hospitals the usual amount of sickness has prevailed, but most of the cases have promptly yielded to treatment. At Ward's Island there are 120 acres of land owned by the Commissioners, on which are the hospitals, lying-in wards, apartments for children, etc. The buildings are in perfect repair, and ample for the accommodation of 3,000 destitute emigrants. The plans for the erection of a new asylum for the insane on Ward's Island have not been adopted as yet, and it is determined to extend the time for the reception of the plans until Feb. 15, in order that as great perfection as possible may be attained. It is intended to make this institution a model one, and to give the patients the benefit of the best medical skill the country affords.

MR. BERNARD CASSERLY.

The Commissioners close their report, as they have of past years, with a high compliment to the energy of Mr. CASSERLY, who, as General Agent and Superintendent, has discharged the duties of his office so faithfully during a long period. He has been connected with the Emigrant Commission since 1847, is familiar with every detail of the Department, and applies himself unceasingly to the duties of his position.

The Metropolitan Board of Excise.

In all probability the fourth annual report of the Board of Excise will be its last. The Democracy have decreed its downfall, the liquor dealers—whose name is legion—demand a reformation backward, and now that the Democrats have the power in the Legislature, it is not clear that they can escape acceding to the demand for a thorough modification and reconstruction of the Excise laws so as to give the liquor dealers more liberty.

The annual report is very interesting, but no more so, perhaps, than are the reports of the Health Board, Commissioners of Emigration and others which we have given to the public in these columns. The Commissioners, in their report, labor to show, by carefully prepared tables, that which they have shown in previous reports, viz.: That the Excise law has diminished intoxication, as witness the diminished arrests for that offense, on Sundays particularly. That tabular statement will be found in all the reports, and goes to show one simple fact but no more. The Commissioners, in their report, use this as an argument in favor of the retention of the law, but the Democratic members of the Legislature will scarcely see it in that light.

Another argument which is presented in the report is that based upon the adulteration of liquors, the facts of which have already been given to the public in the reports which were printed at the time of the investigation. It is not pretended that the Board of Excise has done anything to prevent the adulteration of liquors—that being not within its province—and how the continuance of the Board will effect anything in this respect is not shown.

WHAT WILL BE DONE WITH THE LAW.

Unquestionably the Excise Board will be abolished, the law will be modified so as to give the Mayors of cities and the Supervisors of counties the appointment of Excise Commissioners, and it is understood that the law will be made operative throughout the entire State. The rates of license will remain about the same as now, and the restrictions in regard to the hours of opening and closing will be removed or modified. The provision with respect to the sale of liquor on Sundays, and days on which elections are held, will, it is thought, be retained.

THE STATISTICS.

We prefer to summarize the statistics presented in the report, for the reason stated yesterday, that the public care really very little about dry details, and prefer to become at once acquainted with the aggregates. Last year there were two classes of licenses, at $250 and $100. This year the largest amount charged has been $250, and this only in a few instances—to first-class hotels. The other fees have ranged from $30 to $125. When the law went into effect, in 1866, there were 9,720 places in New-York and Brooklyn where liquor was publicly sold. In 1868 there were 7,301, and during the present year 900 new places have been opened, 750 have been closed from various causes, and 150 new licenses have been issued. This will make a total of 7,611 liquor stores of various grades in active operation in the Metropolitan district.

The report makes no recommendation, but simply presents the facts and leaves the members of the Legislature to form their own conclusions. This is by far the safest way. Allusion is made to the demand by the Commissioners of the Sinking Fund of this City for a portion of the Excise moneys, and the action of the Treasurer in the premises is stated. A detailed account is given of all the receipts and disbursements, but about these the public care very little.

The Metropolitan Fire Commissioners.

It is probable that the Legislature will make a radical change in this Commission. It is proposed to increase the force—nearly double it, indeed—and make the Commission thoroughly Democratic in politics. The paid system will be continued, and there has been some talk of increasing salaries, but that may not be true.

The Commissioners, in their report, point with pride to the record, which shows a decrease in the losses by fire during the period in which the Commission has been in existence, and the following comparative table is given, showing the "estimated losses by fire for the years ending NOV. 30, 1866, 1867, 1868 and 1869:"

Years.	No. of Fires.	Estimated Loss.	Loss than in 1866.	Loss than in 1867.	Less than in 1868.
1867	873	5,711,000	$717,000	.....	.....
1868	740	4,342,371	2,085,629	$1,368,629	.....

The Commissioners took hold of the Fire Department in 1865, when a paid system was yet an untried experiment in this section. They have labored under many disadvantages, but have steadily persevered in their work, and now consider that they have as perfect a fire department under their control as it is possible to make in such a brief period of time. The method of extinguishing fires has been reduced almost to a science, and the regularity with which the force operates is something sublime when compared with the disorder which reigned at fires a few years ago.

During the year there have been added to the machinery of the Department, five second size engines, and one hook and ladder truck for No. 8. There are now in the Department three first class engines, thirty-one second size and eight third size, and sixteen hook and ladder trucks.

THE FIRE MARSHAL.

Though this officer is connected with the Metropolitan Police Department, yet his duties bring him into such intimate relations with the business of extinguishing fires that it is not improper to discuss them here.

This Bureau was organized in 1868, and has therefore been in operation but a short time. Captain CHARLES N. BRACKETT was promoted from his position of Captain on the Police force to be Metropolitan Fire Marshal, and no better selection could have been made. Earnest in the discharge of every duty assigned him, he took hold of this new Bureau with a determination to make it creditable to the Police Department, and he has succeeded. He can point to his record—which will be presented with the report of the Police Commissioners—with pride. The evidence on file in the offices of the Prosecuting Attorneys of the district, shows that for the first fifteen months of the organization of the Bureau, there were more convictions for arson than had been obtained in the previous five years.

If insurance companies would be a little more careful in their examination of premises and stores before insurance is effected, the labors of the Fire Marshal would be lightened, though those of the company's surveyor might be increased.

Twenty years ago a Connecticut man left a watch with a jeweler, to be cleaned and repaired, saying that he would be in town in a day or two and call for it. Last week the man called in at the jeweler's and asked: "Do you remember my leaving a watch with you a number of years since to be cleaned?" "Yes," replied the jeweler, "and here it is."

It is told of a miller, who was recently killed in his mill, that on the night before the accident, he dreamed that he was drawn through some portion of the mill, and so met his fate as it has happened. Next morning he remarked that he had "a horrible night." At the moment of the accident, his wife, who was away, thought she heard him call, saying, "MATTIE, my poor wife, come to me." So plain did it seem to her, she went into the adjoining room to see if her sister did not hear the call.

A young woman, not more than eighteen years old, described as handsome and intelligent, and apparently having had more than ordinary facilities for acquiring those arts and graces which are gained only in polite society, has been telling several citizens of Providence a pitiful story of having been robbed in the cars, and wanting enough money to take her to Chicago, where her parents reside. It is thought she has already secured enough in that city to take her round the world, and it is suggested she had better commence her journey if she wishes to avoid arrest.

He succeeded, however, in so arranging his affairs that the judgment could not be collected, and he was consequently put upon the "limits." The friends of Miss GAULT subsequently procured an indictment against him for seduction under promise of marriage, and the trial resulted as abo ve stated.

After searching her, however, nothing contraband was discovered on her, and she was released from surveillance. The craft is destined for West India waters.

THE POLICE FORCE.

What it Was and Will Be—Probable Action of the Legislature—Personal Changes Demanded and Expected—Effect of the Changes Upon the Force.

A consequence of the Democratic triumph in this State at the last general election that will be most keenly felt in this City will be the changes to be made by the Legislature in the control of its Police force. For eight years past it has been under Republican management, and during that time it secured the confidence of the law-abiding portion of our citizens and the admiration of strangers. It prevented, too, by contrast with its predecessor, for the public remembrance of WOOD'S vagabonds long outlived those parodies on policemen, and when, as they did, our citizens saw the conservators of the public peace a body of discreet, disciplined, sober, stalwart men, they were delighted, and could not fail to see how vastly superior they were to the gangs of vicious, unorganized and intemperate idlers they supplanted. When the great riots of 1863 came, the Police gained a still stronger hold on the public confidence, for their heroism was apparent even to their enemies, and their patient endurance and unhesitating obedience to their chiefs were generally conceded. After those bloody scenes came the hot and boiling days of the great war, when the nation swerved for the time from the calm course of judicial procedure and sought ends without strict regard to means. The Police of New-York, like everything else, naturally was tinged by the lurid light of the times, and had the honor of being called the "tool of despotism" by Democratic Presses. Naturally too it took by degrees the character of its two directing chiefs during the last years of Republican supremacy. President ACTON and Superintendent KENNEDY, when clothed with untrammeled power, were aggressive in behalf of what they considered the right. They sought rather to serve the spirit of the law than to observe its strict letter, and thus occasions came when Democracy was afforded the pleasure of heaping all manner of vile epithets upon them and the force in their charge. There were doubtless some mistakes committed, for they were but mortal, but on the whole the substantial good remained that they have made New-York City quiet, and thereby earned the undying hatred of the predatory and disorderly classes. But while they were thus aggressive, and so much so in behalf of the Excise law that they perilled the stability of the Republican Party, it could not be denied, even by their enemies, that the discipline of the force was constantly improving. Unworthy men, as was later of course, found their way into the ranks, but they were weeded out as fast as discovered. Thus the force was continually being bettered, and its onward progress was not arrested by the death of Mr. BERGEN and the accession of Judge BRENNAN to the Board. By that event the Commissioners became equally divided between the two parties, Mr. ACTON and Mr. MANIERRE being the Republican members, and Judges BOSWORTH and BRENNAN representing the Democracy. That condition of affairs left Mr. ACTON and Superintendent KENNEDY the virtual heads of the force. The Board being thus equalized they were free to follow the bent of their own wills, and they were for the time autocratic. Matters continued thus until ill-health compelled Mr. ACTON to resign, and for a time the Board was in an anomalous condition, being without a President until the next meeting of the Legislature, when it received its complement of members in the election of HENRY SMITH, a presumed Republican, and the Board being of half and half politically, was reorganized by the selection of Judge BOSWORTH, a Democrat, as its President. From that time until the present the Police patronage has been to a great extent in the hands of the Democracy, and the fact can be most briefly illustrated by saying that since the reorganization of the Board there have been five Captains appointed, and three of these are Democrats. It is well known also to those familiar with the force that a majority of recent appointments are of the same political faith, so that it is already largely infused with Democracy.

But thus far it has been a matter of give and take with the Commissioners, and not until after the Board is reorganized in January will the Democracy regain that absolute control of the Police which they lost in 1857. That this reorganization will occur, is universally conceded; but what particular form it will take is still matter for speculation. After all their howling during the years of Republican supremacy about the usurpation of municipal rights in the creation of the Police Commission, there is no talk among the Democracy about abolishing that of the Police; on the contrary, sachems and followers openly declare that it is to be retained, but made Democratic. It will probably be increased to five members, and for appearance's sake the Mayors of New-York and Brooklyn made ex-officio members. For the same reason Mr. HENRY SMITH will be allowed to retain his seat, and the other two members will be Judges BOSWORTH and BRENNAN until May next, when the term of the former expires, and it is hinted that the vacancy will be filled by the appointment of WM. DODGE, who on the 1st prox. vacates the bench of Police Magistrates. This, however, is only conjecture of the several programmes, and this as well as others may be disarranged by contingencies already in existence, or which may arise in the future. There will undoubtedly be a bitter fight in the Legislature over the Police Commission, owing to the contest between MATHEW T. BRENNAN and RICHARD B. CONNOLLY for the Comptrollership next Fall, and until the relative forces of these Tammany giants is tested, there can be no certainty as to the result. Just now it appears that the game is in the hands of BRENNAN, but the Democratic politician is most uncertain of an uncertain race, and it is idle to predict the end until the contestants have fairly crossed swords at Albany. The fight is most likely to come on the question of stripping the Police Commissioners of the power of appointing inspectors and canvassers of election, and relegating that function to the Supervisors. If the Bureau of Elections, as now constituted, is not overturned, it may be considered that Judge BRENNAN has the better show in the fight.

But whichever of the factions triumphs the effect upon the Police force will be about the same. There is not at present any purpose to violently revolutionize the force, and it can only be made entirely Democratic gradually. Officers can only be legislated out or put out on specific charges made and proven, and the former will not be used as a general remedy. Superintendent KENNEDY will, of course, be legislated out, unless he renders that process unnecessary by resignation, of which there are rumors, and Captain JOHN JOURDAN, of the Sixth Precinct, is generally mentioned as his successor in the supreme command. The Democracy could have done far worse than this, for there is not in the force an abler detective or a better policeman, in the true meaning of the term, than Captain JOURDAN. Left to himself which he is not, he would be competent in consequence of idiosyncracies of MR. KENNEDY would be corrected, and the force maintained in an excellent condition. In personal integrity, too, he is equal to the present incumbent, who, after nine years' service as Police Superintendent, leaves an office where thousands might have been filched without any one being able to state that he ever received a penny by any indiscretion. Upon the whole, therefore, the change in the Chief Executive direction of the force will not be a cause for poignant public grief. In coming to the subordinates, three of the four Inspectors are Republicans, but there is no present intention of disturbing except possibly to reassign them to the several spheres of duty. There are in New-York thirty-five Captains, and of these only eight are Democrats, but of the twenty-seven Republicans only three or four have been known as violent partisans, and made themselves politically obnoxious. These will probably be hurried out of the force in some way and vacancies will inevitably and always be filled with Democrats. The lower grades of Sergeants and Patrolmen will be changed politically in the same way, to which, however, must be added, that of conversion, of which there have been already some remarkable cases since the election. The Fire Marshal's Bureau being a specialty, can be treated by legislation; and there is no doubt whatever that the present incumbents will be speedily ousted and the comfortable places filled with the faithful. The civil employes of the Board can, of course, be changed at will, and the various positions at the Central Office will naturally be made vacant for the benefit of the henchmen of Tammany. There is, indeed, some talk about the retention of Mr. S. C. HAWLEY, the Chief Clerk, and it is not known that any one is positively booked for dismissal except Mr. HORACE BLISS, Inspector's Clerk.

Upon the whole it may be concluded that there are to be no such sweeping changes in the force as the people expected and as the rancorous Democracy for a time demanded. It will, however, pass entirely under Democratic influence and control, and naturally be animated by an utterly different spirit. Whoever the Commissioners may be, they will endeavor to appoint the proper kind of men, but badgered as they will be by unscrupulous ward politicians of the Democratic faith, the task will be an impossible one. A vicious element will inevitably creep into the ranks, and the force gradually be demoralized until it will seem to approach the disgrace it succeeded. But to be that disgrace again is impossible, and there is no danger that the counterparts of WOOD'S policemen will ever again keep watch and ward in our streets.

The Gunboats Again—Further Delays—Twenty Thousand Tons of Coal to be Purchased in New-York—Four Steam Sloops of War to be Built.

The Isabel Catolica and her charge still ride to their anchors on the quiet bosom of New-York Harbor; nor does there appear to be the slightest chance of their departure at this side of New Year's Day. Coal is the immediate demand, as the Spaniards purpose buying 20,000 tons in New-York for consumption on board of their war steamers on the Cuban station.

We have been informed by persons intimately connected with the Spanish Naval Commission in this City, that Admiral MALCAMPO, commanding the Spanish fleet at Cuba and in our waters, now holds $1,000,000 in gold contributed by the residents in the "Ever Faithful Isle" to purchase two new steam sloops of war, and he is to receive $500,000 more in gold for the building of two more when the first two shall be completed. Each vessel is to cost $400,000. This would be good news for the shipbuilding portion of our readers if the vessels were to be constructed in our City, or even in America. But the chances are that they will not, for the Spaniards say that the American Government has given them too much trouble with the flotilla of gunboats built by Mr. DELAMATER, and they fear that, even could the vessels be built, fitted out and ready for sea to-morrow, their departure from the port would be prevented by some legal process. Allowing that their release would be granted the following week, the expense and bother attending the seizure and release are such as the Spanish Government do not care to incur. Therefore the probability is that some English shipbuilder will get this valuable contract.

It is said that a proposition is before the Cuban Junta for the appointment of a delegation of three leading members to go to Washington to cooperate with Señor LEMUS in the effort to get the Senate to take some action in behalf of the Cuban insurgents.

ANOTHER DEFALCATION.

The Cashier of the Merchants' Exchange National Bank Loses $150,000 in Speculation—The Financial Standing of the Bank Uninjured—Its Accounts Being Investigated.

Something of a ripple was created in financial circles yesterday, by the announcement, made in the TIMES, that a defalcation had been discovered in the Merchants' Exchange National Bank, and interested parties were at once on the alert to discover the particulars in relation to the affair. It was known that a Committee of the Directors was in session, but, until a late hour, nothing was made apparent as to the amount of the defalcation, or as to who was the defaulter. The circumstances connected with the matter, so far as they can be now ascertained, are as follows: It came to the knowledge of the President of the bank, MR. SAMUEL E. SPROULLS, a few days ago, that there were discrepancies in the accounts of the institution, though he was not aware whence they arose. In order that a thorough and impartial investigation might be had into the affair, Mr. SPROULLS forthwith put the books of the bank into the hands of a committee, with the express understanding that he was not to be informed as to anything concerning the defalcation until the Committee had come to an agreement as to where the blame lay in the premises. This Committee called in to their aid Mr. WILLIAM A. CAMP, manager of the Clearing House, and proceeded to an examination of the accounts, the result of which was found to be that the Cashier of the bank, Mr. EDWARD J. OAKLEY, is a defaulter to the amount of about $150,000. This information was forthwith conveyed to the President. The Committee have securities deposited by the Cashier from which they hope to realize sufficient to cover this default entirely—at least a portion of it will certainly be covered by them—but should the bank lose the whole amount its financial standing and pecuniary responsibility will not be impaired. The capital of the institution is $1,235,000. Not many days since the Board of Directors declared a dividend, payable in January next, which will be promptly paid, and after this is paid, even if the $150,0000 be entirely defaulted from the non-realization of money on the securities, there will still be a surplus of from $75,000 to $100,000 over and above all claims against the institution. The Board of Directors, on its own motion, immediately called Mr. CALLENDER, the Inspector of Banks, to make a searching investigation into the affairs of the bank and that official has already begun his labors in that direction. His report will doubtless show the entire reliability of the institution to meet any just demands against it.

The cause of the defalcation is reported to be the old story—speculation with the bank funds, begun in a small way some time ago, and continued on the larger scale, and the balance, in the hope of recovering the amounts lost. The brother of the Cashier, a tobacco inspector, it is alleged, is the person through whose influence that official was led into the speculations which have eventuated so disastrously. Mr. OAKLEY has been for many years in the employ of the bank, and his perfect confidence was always reposed in his integrity. Even now there is no desire on the part of the bank officials to judge too harshly of his actions, and much sympathy is felt for him, notwithstanding the unfortunate position in which he has placed himself by listening to the inducements held out by others. It is not believed that he has derived any personal profit from his reprehensible course of procedure.

GOVERNING BROOKLYN.

Proposed Charter Amendments—Sage Advice to the Common Council.

The Law Committee of the Board of Aldermen of Brooklyn made the following report on Monday, which was not read but ordered to be printed. It will come up for consideration, and is of importance, relating as it does to a multitude of interests:

It says that the rapid growth of the City in population, the consequent changes in its modes of government, the abolition of old systems and the adoption of new ones, together with the numerous amendments of the charter which have been made from time to time under the influence of conflicting views and interests, render the present system of municipal law incongruous, unwieldy and contradictory in many of its provisions. Moreover, owing to various influences, several irregular and exceptional modes of appointment of city officers have been engrafted upon our laws, the effect of which have been to annihilate all responsibility, as far as it is possible to accomplish that end without utterly abolishing all the forms of law.

After some further remarks the report concludes as follows:

Some of the general principles upon which amendments to the charter should be made are:

First—All the present irregular and exceptional modes of appointment of City officers and heads of departments to be abolished, and the principal officers to be appointed by the Mayor and approved by the Common Council.

Second—The elective officers, except the Mayor and Aldermen, to be appointed in the same way, but the present incumbents to hold office during their present terms. All Inspectors of Pavements and of Contracts to be appointed in the same way.

Third—The powers of authority of the Water Board to be restored as it existed previous to the act of 1869, and the powers taken by that act from the Common Council and invested in the Water Board to be restored to the Common Council, with provisions authorizing street improvements without petitions and notwithstanding remonstrances, by a two-thirds vote of members elected, with the approval of the Mayor, or by a unanimous vote without his approval, after he shall have expressed his disapproval within a certain time to be fixed.

The report is signed by Aldermen FISHER, CUNNINGHAM, WHITNEY and WHITING.

CHRISTMAS FESTIVALS.

The Wilson Industrial School—Brief Sketch of the Charity.

A most enjoyable affair was that which took place yesterday morning at the Wilson Industrial School for Girls, located at the corner of Avenue A and Eighth-street. Three-fold in its nature, being the Christmas festival, annual exhibition and the first public exercise held in the new Mission building. Over 200 girls belonging to the school were present, and a majority of those interested in the work were present as spectators. The exercises consisted of singing, Scriptural recitations, dialogues, and exhibitions of proficiency in arithmetic, geography and other studies, in all of which the pupils did themselves great credit. Appropriate addresses were made by Rev. Dr. ADAMS, of the Madison-square Presbyterian Church, and by Mr. MCCARTHY, of Dr. HALL'S church, after which a number of valuable prizes were distributed among those who, by their conduct during the year, had proved themselves deserving. In addition a Christmas tree furnished a finely-dressed doll for each scholar, and a feasting of the children at a well-spread table closed the festivities of a day which will be long remembered by all who were privileged to be present.

A brief word in regard to the work which is being done at this school, and the great good which has been and is being daily accomplished, cannot fail to be interesting. This industrial school, the first of its kind started in New-York and which has grown to its present proportions, was opened in 1852 at No. 118 Avenue D, in a small upper room. Its plan was simple, embracing a morning session for instruction in the common English branches, a warm dinner at noon, and an afternoon session for instruction in sewing. This is the general plan now pursued, although the scope for work is much larger. In 1854 the school was chartered by the Legislature, under its present name, so-called in honor of Mrs. JAS. P. WILSON, its chief founder, and before the end of the year, by

On actual cash sales, although one or two leading drawers still talked of 109 ₱ cent. for 60 days' London, we quote 108⅞ ₱ cent. for 60 days; 109¼@109⅜ ₱ cent. short sight; 109⅝ ₱ cent. for cash transfers. On Paris, 5.18¾f. to the dollar for 60 days, 5.16¼f. @5.15f. to the dollar, sight and short sight. Money is easy at 6@7 ₱ cent. on call to the Brokers.

On the Stock Exchange the business in the Public Funds is ¼ of 1 ₱ cent. easier than the best prices of yesterday, and the business done was less in amount than on Monday. The Treasury will buy $2,000,000 United States 5-20s at noon to-morrow.

The Southern State Bonds were firmer on Tennessees, and steady on North Carolinas and Louisianas. In other departments of the Stock Exchange, the speculation continued very dull, and the sales of the New-York and Western Railways were, if anything, weaker than on Monday. The Miscellaneous Share list was also weaker, and the whole market indicated the extreme dullness of holiday week, from which some recovery is reasonably anticipated after the New Year.

The Second National Bank of Cleveland —A Novel Suit at Law.

From the Cleveland Herald, Dec. 27.

CHARLES HICKOX vs. GEORGE W. GARDNER, executor of the will of ORSON M. OVIATT, GEORGE W. GARDNER and the Merchants' National Bank of Cleveland, is the title of a suit just commenced in the Court of Common Pleas. The petition sets forth that on the 16th day of November, 1869, GEORGE W. GARDNER, as executor of O. M. OVIATT, owned thirty-three shares of the capital stock of the Second National Bank of Cleveland, and represented to the plaintiff that the stock was good and valid stock, that the capital stock of said Second National Bank actually paid in was $1,000,000, and that the bank had an accumulated surplus over and above its said capital stock of $120,000, and that thirty-three shares were worth a premium of twenty per cent. Also, that said GARDNER, as such executor, then held a certificate for said stock, duly issued by said bank, which certificate was numbered 244 and was for thirty-three shares at par, dated Nov. 10, 1869. In consideration of all which the plaintiff bought said stock, paying therefor $3,960, giving his two promissory notes for the amount, payable at the Merchants' National Bank, and $40 63 cash, and receiving the said certificate assigned in blank by said GARDNER, executor, &c.

The plaintiff further alleges that the bank did not have a capital of $1,000,000, nor had it $120,000 surplus; that said certificates did not represent, in fact, good or valid stock in said bank, but was issued by the officers of said bank without authority and under a mistake upon their part in regard to the power and duty in the premises, the sum of $725, and no more having been paid to said bank on account of the stock represented by said certificate; and that said certificate has now been recalled by the bank for the purpose of cancellation. The plaintiff prays such injunction as will restrain the disposal of the notes to other parties, and asks the restoration to him of the notes and the money paid, and tenders the certificate of stock, which he has given into the hands of the Clerk of the Court for that purpose.

The injunction was granted till the final hearing before the Court.

Such is the case on the part of the plaintiff. The answer of Mr. GARDNER is yet to be made. The trial of the case and the decision of the Court will possess much interest. The transaction occurred between two of our most honorable business men, and no one doubts the good faith of either at the time of the sale. The developments made on the notable 22d day of November reduced previous supposed certainties to nothings, not only in this case, but in many others very rapidly.

BANKING AND FINANCIAL.

☞ THE FIRST MORTGAGE BONDS OF THE WESTERN PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY possess features calculated to commend them especially to careful and prudent investors, capitalists, and institutions having money to invest, and holders of Government bonds desiring to realize the premium thereon.

The Loan is unusually light in proportion to the value of the property which is mortgaged to secure it, being but $2,800,000, while the road and equipments are worth at least $10,000,000.

The road is COMPLETED, so that the entire security is a reality, and no portion of it contingent and prospective.

It is in successful and profitable operation, already demonstrating the power to earn the annual interest on the bonds several times over.

It is under careful, able and honorable management.

Price 90 and accrued interest from July 1, in currency. Bonds $1,000 each. Interest payable January and July in the City of New-York.

Principal and interest payable in gold.

In purchases made before Jan. 1 there is an advantage of about ¼ of 1 per cent. to be realized from the premium on the accrued interest, which the purchaser pays in currency, and will receive in gold Jan. 1.

FISK & HATCH, Bankers.

☞ BANKING HOUSE OF JAY COOKE & CO., CORNER WALL AND NASSAU STS.

In view of the large amount of JANUARY INTEREST AND DIVIDENDS soon to be disbursed and seek new INVESTMENT, we desire to call the attention of our customers to the FIRST MORTGAGE 7 PER CENT. BONDS of the LAKE SUPERIOR and MISSISSIPPI RAILROAD COMPANY, one of the few securities we feel safe in recommending as [good.

The importance of the route connecting the head of the Mississippi River navigation with the head of Lake Superior, and receiving the trade of the five railroads centering at St. Paul, will insure to this road a large and profitable trade. The Land Grant—1,932,000 acres—is in itself an amply sufficient basis for the mortgage, ($4,500,000,) and all proceeds of land sales are applied directly to cancelation of the bonds.

The parties in interest embrace some of the first railroad and financial men of the country, and Mr. Moorehead, of our firm, is one of the Trustees of the mortgage.

The construction of the road is progressing rapidly, and the whole line will be completed in time for the moving of the crops of 1870.

We recommend these bonds as paying a much larger interest than Government Securities, without the risk of a high premium. We have for sale $300,000, at the original subscription price, 95 and accrued interest in currency, (denominations $500 and $1,000 coupon.) Purchasers six month have the advantage of the gold coupon payable at our office on Jan. 1—the premium upon which is equal to nearly ¼ per cent., making the price lower than many bonds of much less merit now offered to the public.

We receive in payment Governments and other securities at their market value, and January coupons at the current gold price of the day.

JAY COOKE & CO.

☞ THE CENTRAL RAILROAD COMPANY OF IOWA offers its First Mortgage seven per cent. Gold Bonds at 95, free of tax. W. B. SHATTUCK, Treasurer.

☞ DES MOINES VALLEY RAILROAD EIGHT PER CENT. LAND GRANT MORTGAGE BONDS.

The undersigned offer for sale a limited amount of the above-named bonds. They are receivable at par by the Company in payment for any of its lands sold at scheduled prices. The lands are pledged for the redemption of the bonds, and consist of 486,000 acres of choice locations, situated mostly in the Des Moines Valley, (Iowa,) and are estimated to realize enough to nearly or quite cancel the whole issue of bonds, in addition to the security of the Road. Price, 90 per cent. For further particulars inquire of EUROPE.

The resignation of the French Ministry is officially announced. A letter from the Emperor is also published inviting M. OLLIVIER to form a new Cabinet, who shall represent the legislative majority and be prepared to carry out the Senatus Consultum of Sept. 8. The Emperor counts on the Legislature and the Cabinet to put in successful operation a constitutional régimé. The Liberal journals of Paris regard this as a sign of the end of "personal government" and the first chapter of the "Liberal Empire." The regular session of the Corps Legislatif opened yesterday, when M. SCHNEIDER was chosen President.... The trial of TRAUPMANN for the murder of the KINCK family, began yesterday in Paris....A dreadful calamity occurred in a theatre in Bristol, England, on Monday night. A panic seized the audience and in the crush to escape from the building eighteen persons were killed and many injured....The London Times says the case of the Alabama is the only plausible one presented by the American Government against England, and the Union cruisers were most to blame for having allowed her to get to sea....In submitting questions to the Committees of the Ecumenical Council, nothing has yet been said of Papal infallibility....Dispatches from Vienna received in London confirm the reported suppression of the Dalmatian revolt.

Union of the Republican Party in this City—Election of the New General Committee.

The terms of union for the Republican Party of the City and County of New-York, agreed upon at the instance of the State General Committee last Summer, and ratified by the Republican State Convention, have been thus far carried to success. To-night the programme will be completed by the election of delegates in the various Assembly Districts, who are to constitute the new Union General Committee.

The new enrollment, which took place on the 15th and 16th instant, was in some districts a mere subterfuge—an out right fraud on the party. It included hundreds of names, comprising in some instances a clear majority in the district, who never yet voted the Republican ticket, and who, unless some special grace be vouchsafed them beyond that which they now manifest, never will vote that ticket. The question arises, therefore, how these interlopers succeeded in making their appearance. The answer is a very short one. They were, in several cases, brought in by rival Republican leaders in the respective districts, who wished to get control of the district organization, and looked upon this as the shortest way to do it. However, this state of affairs is only true of a minority of the districts. The Republicans who are devoted heartily, patriotically, and at any sacrifice of personal interests, to a union of the party in this City, have succeeded in controlling most of the nominations for delegates to the General Convention. The new Committee which is hereafter to control the action of the party in this county, to give it its character, to represent its aims and interests, and to mould its destinies, bids fair to be composed of Republicans who have the peace, the harmony, and the best and truest interests of the party at heart.

The Committee of Twelve, appointed from the Twenty-second and Twenty-third-street organizations to decide who shall enter the General Committee, in case of there being contesting delegates from any of the districts, is composed of staunch and trustworthy Republicans, and gentlemen of established integrity and public fidelity. They will take abundant precaution that no Democrats in disguise or trading Republicans who have not the interests of the party at heart, shall find a place on the General Committee.

This Committee of Twelve, or Joint Committee on Reorganization, hold, of course, the key of the situation. And it is precisely because of its composition, inspiring confidence at the start, that we have spoken as we have of the prospects of union to-night. The new General Committee, to be elected then, will meet in Convention and organize itself by the election of officers on the first Tuesday in January, from and after which time all rival organizations of the Republican Party in this City are to cease, and the party is to be in name, and so far as honest work can make it, in spirit, a unity.

Such is the programme of mutual concession and of reorganization now on the point of consummation. But one thing more is wanting, namely, that the good men of the Republican Party shall come out and enter heartily into the movement and management of the party in this City. Elsewhere we have formally announced the duty of to-night—namely, that all Union Republican electors, residents of the City of New-York, enrolled under the call issued by the Special Committee on Reorganization' shall meet in their respective Assembly Districts (whose places of meeting are specified in the Committee's call) to elect officers of their district associations and delegates to the new General Committee for 1870. All this is done under the agreement for consolidation of the rival organizations. But mere form of union will not do without its spirit. What we urge is, that the spirit of harmony and conciliation may prevail, and that the approaching union shall be genuine, hearty and lasting. Never, we think, were initiatory measures more promising; never did a proposition for union start under auspices so favorable. It only remains for the good men of the Republican Party to take hold of the matter in earnest in order to render the organization in this City worthy, harmonious and efficient.

Relief for the People—Cheap Coal.

The question of questions for the American people at the present time is, how to reduce the burdens of taxation in the best mode, so as most to relieve production and not too far diminish the annual revenue. Commissioner WELLS has wisely devoted especial attention to this important point in his recent report. He starts with the comfortable estimate of a surplus during the next year of receipts over expenditures equal to that of the last fiscal year, namely, $49,000,000. To this must be added $13,000,000 bounty moneys, now substantially settled, and the moneys paid out for the purchase of Alaska, $0,350,000; thus giving us a total surplus of $71,350,000 at the end of the coming year. To this again must be added the average annual increase of the revenue, or its "elasticity," as economists rather absurdly have denominated it, resulting from the increase of population, and an increased consumption of taxable articles,—a gain estimated by Mr. WELLS as from $12,000,000 to $15,000,000 per annum.

From the reforms in the internal revenue system, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue estimates a gain of $15,000,000 for the coming year, which is undoubtedly a low estimate. From customs duties, Mr. WELLS does not claim any increase of revenue, though the past five months indicate a gain. In the reduction of expenditures, the Secretary of the Treasury estimates a gain of $36,000,000; so that from all these sources we may reasonably expect the snug surplus, at the end of the coming year, of $124,000,000. This is, without doubt, a very moderate estimate.

How shall this surplus be used? One school of economists claims that it must be entirely employed in paying the future obligations of the nation. Another, which has been led by this journal, urge that the best mode of enabling the people to pay the debt of the war is to take off the burdens from production. We need not say that Commissioner WELLS supports this view with an array of facts and arguments such as have never yet been brought into the controversy.

In common with the TIMES, he adopts the medium course, recommending that a certain proportion of this surplus be set apart for paying our debts—say, $74,000,000—and that $50,000,000 be withdrawn from taxes, so that industry may obtain its materials at the least cost, and the elements of living be made cheaper to the masses of the people. We think that the proportion applied to the reduction of taxes should be increased, and the proportion applied to the debt diminished; but for the moment we are stating Mr. WELLS' recommendation rather than our own. The three great sources of internal revenue he would leave untouched—the taxes on whisky, beer and tobacco. The income tax, he proposes, should be reduced from five to three per cent., leaving the exemption of $1,000 as now, but only exempting rents below $300. This proposal must strike all parties as wise and moderate. The Commissioner further recommends the repeal of special taxes or licenses, together with the taxes on the gross receipts of railroads, stage coaches, insurance, telegraph and express companies, &c. These reductions, together with the taxes on the sales of articles not otherwise taxed, he estimates as amounting to $26,000,000.

On the question of the remaining reduction of $24,000,000 from the taxation under the tariff, he treads on ground where special interests will undoubtedly contest every step with the bitterest hostility. His fundamental practical principle, however, will probably meet with the approval of most who are not extremists in the great controversy, namely, that the average duty of forty-seven per cent. on dutiable imports under the present tariff is excessive, and tends to burden many branches of production at home and to impoverish all consumers.

Among various recommendations of the Commissioner which deserve careful attention, as to the removal or lessening of duties, we concur particularly with that in regard to coal. A tax upon coal is like a tax on breadstuffs or food. It weighs especially on the poor. It is a tax, too, upon motive power—on the great "laborer" in our domestic industry. It falls also mainly on the coldest and most densely populated portion of our national area, and that where wood has been most destroyed, and, consequently, where coal is most needed—on New-England, New-York and the Atlantic coast. It puts a burden on that particular region where coal is in most demand for manufacture. A duty on tea or coffee, as Mr. WELLS remarks, falls on the whole country. This weighs down the consumer in New-York or New-England, while it does not touch him in Pittsburg or St. Louis. It is a duty, too, which does not benefit the producer of coal, as the enhanced price is expended entirely in paying for the transportation of coal to districts which could be supplied more cheaply from abroad. It is a payment for useless labor, and "protects" no one. We tax one of the greatest daily necessities, and the motive power of machinery, to benefit a few transportation companies, and with a loss to the whole community.

The Ramsey-Erie Suit and Judge Balcom's Decision.

We do not refer to this litigation by reason of any interest in the parties, but from the public importance of the questions involved. Nor do we refer to Judge BALCOM any further than his action involves the public interests. His course has certainly been consistent throughout, and in its results we should be compelled to think it a great public misfortune, if it was final.

When Judge MURRAY'S order, which authorized a public examination of the Erie managers and suspended eight of the directors' pending the investigation, reached this City, Judge BALCOM was here also, and he at once stayed all proceedings under these orders. He would not even allow them to be served, and much less a single question to be publicly asked of his friend, JAY GOULD, under oath. Very soon Judge BARNARD issued an injunction, going even beyond Judge BALCOM'S, and stopping—or aiming to stop—all proceedings whatever in the Ramsey suit. All danger thus apparently averted, Judge BALCOM, as he says in his opinion just published, without being requested by any one, "corrected" his first order, and so kindly allowed the orders of his brother Judge to be served, but not to have any effect.

In the meantime, GOULD, LANE and FISK went on acting as directors in bold and assured defiance of Judge MURRAY'S orders, just as they were going on when Judge BALCOM granted his first order. In due course, the orders of Judge MURRAY swung around before Judge BALCOM for a rehearing, which has now been had; not on any new papers, but on the identical papers on which the case was first heard before Judge MURRAY. It is one of the beauties of our legal system, and one of the peculiarities of some of those who administer it, that such anomalies are possible. A case may be thus dragged from one Judge to another, and heard and reheard; the decisions, if different, depending, of course, not on the law or the facts, but on the peculiarities or the bias of the several Judges.

Judge BALCOM has now decided, and if we understand his decision he finds nothing in the Erie management to condemn,—thinks if there was ever anything to condemn it was condoned by the last election,—and if it was not condoned, that Mr. RAMSEY, as a stockholder and bondholder, should not be allowed to call the guilty parties to account. He also seems to consider that there was nothing stated in Mr. RAMSEY'S complaint that calls upon a Court to take any proceedings; and concludes, as he began in the business, with defeating that part of Judge MURRAY'S order which provides for the examination of GOULD, FISK, LANE and others as witnesses, and which might lead to the facts if Judge BALCOM really wants any more than he has got.

As laymen, we may be excused, we suppose, for not regarding all this as the administration of justice or as tending to the exposure or punishment of high-handed delinquencies. The best informed men in this community feel confident that the administration of the affairs of the Erie Company has been marked by gross abuses; to us the complaint of Mr. RAMSEY appears to very fully set forth these abuses, and if it was possible for Judge BALCOM to come to the conclusion that there was nothing stated for him as a Judge to condemn or take action upon, how can he excuse his refusal to allow any investigation to proceed?

What reason could he give for undertaking to set aside Judge MURRAY'S order for a referee to ascertain the facts as to these Erie scandals? He surely could not wish to have them concealed. He does not cite any law that calls on him to interfere with the order of his fellow Judge providing for their investigation. He does not state that facts will come out which will injure any one a Judge is bound to protect. He does not, in all his long opinion, refer to any public or private interest which will be injured by a thorough investigation. The united voice of the commercial community demands it. The speedy determination of litigation demands it. The vindication of the laws of the State demands it. Why then did Judge BALCOM begin and end with preventing it?

It would not be fair to say he gives no reasons for refusing it; for he does give some reasons, such as they are. He says the order of his brother Judge directing a reference is inquisitorial. We cannot see any such feature in it. It simply provides for the examination of witnesses on the question whether the suspension of GOULD, FISK and LANE should be held suspended and should be removed. We confess we shall think this community disgraced if, in any proper case, as we had supposed this to be, such an order cannot be enforced. He gives also various technical reasons why Mr. RAMSEY should not be allowed to proceed in the suit; and to our mind a very large portion of the opinion seems to be devoted to a censure of the plaintiff for daring to come into Judge BALCOM'S Court at all, and to a justification of Judge BALCOM in taking the action he has taken. Both gentlemen concerned are well known, and we have nothing to do with the opinion the public may form regarding them.

The great question presented was the stupendous abuses of the Erie management. A stock and bond holder demanded an investigation, and he instituted his proceeding on behalf of himself and of all others similarly situated. He claimed that he had made sufficient proof to call for a temporary suspension of the leading delinquents, and if he had not, he asked that the Court would order further proofs to be taken. In view of such facts and issues, it seems to us that petty criticisms about the amount of stock and bonds the plaintiff owns, and the time during which he had owned them, are trivial, unworthy and misleading. The Judge does not at all meet the issue on its merits. The statute says "any creditor" may maintain the proceedings; and the fact that Mr. RAMSEY is a stockholder, upon which the Judge bestows so much attention, is of no importance as a question of jurisdiction. And the Court having jurisdiction of the subject matter, a fact not denied, as we understand, all that is said about the plaintiff, personally, and his motives, seems irrelevant and extra judicial. As an attempted vindication of the course pursued by the Judge and an attack on the motives of the plaintiff, the opinion is comprehensible and direct enough, but as a specimen of judicial administration, bearing upon the duty and fidelity of corporate officers, it seems to us unfortunate and incomprehensible.

We trust this decision is only a check in the progress of investigation, and that the searching hand of the law will yet bring forth the secrets of the Erie palace, and that the authority of the Courts and the obligations of duty will yet be vindicated and enforced in this litigation. Every banker and merchant and bond and stock holder in this City and country has an interest greater perhaps, than he realizes, in such a result.

The Metropolitan Board of Health.

The Board of Health seems to be in a state of unpleasant doubt whether it will be continued in existence or cut off untimely. "To be or not to be" is the problem with it now. What it is, it knows: what it may become only Governor HOFFMAN and the Tammany Ring can tell. With a Democratic Assembly, Democratic Senate and Democratic Governor, it will go hard but there shall be more or less changes in the Albany Commissions; and with the other Metropolitan Boards, the Board of Health bids fair to suffer.

The question with it, however, as with the other Metropolitan Boards, is whether it will find its occupation wholly gone, or whether it will be continued in existence, like so many other City institutions, as a source of Democratic patronage. Dr. SWINBURNE, the Health Officer, is likely, in any event, to be displaced by a Democrat, and, as we said yesterday, since the terms of Dr. STONE and Mr. LINCOLN expire within a month, their vacancies will probably be filled with Democrats,—which change will give that party the control of the Board. It is not impossible, therefore, that, with this prospect ahead, Tammany may relent towards the Board, more especially as it has always pretended that it afforded snug berths for a variety of subordinates. The chief grievance of Tammany was, that these places existed under its nose, and yet beyond its control. It appeared to Tammany a kind of trespass on its domain to establish offices in the City over which its own precious sceptre, its appointing power, and its percentage of fees or expenses, did not extend.

The work of the Board during its nigh upon four years of existence has been a grateful and useful one. Its whole cost for the three years 1866, 1867 and 1868, was but little over half a million of dollars. During this time it has performed a variety of service. In 1866 it devoted itself to preventing the incursions of the cholera, and its very presence, accompanied as it was with the knowledge that its department of inspection was thoroughly organized, and extended throughout the City, inspired a public confidence in itself beyond price. If NAPOLEON'S dictum regarding the ratio of the moral to the physical be true in war, it is hardly less true in pestilence. Once let public faith be unsettled, let the feeling prevail that there is no competent organization which is entirely devoted to fighting the contagion, and the demoralization of the community is the surest ally to the scourge. On the other hand, the pest loses half its terrors when the labors of such a body as the Board of Health are everywhere apparent.

During the last three years the Board has widely extended its range of duty. Its determined efforts to mitigate the horrors of the tenement houses, its efforts to prevent the slaughtering of cattle in improper localities, its attention to the disgrace of the City markets, its labors regarding the false registration of deaths, regarding the rescue of drowning persons, regarding the cattle disease, regarding such nuisances as those connected with the gas factories and the fat-boiling establishments,—are familiar to all our citizens. Whatever may be the fate in store for it, it has an honorable record thus far, which will be recognized by all public-spirited citizens.

Reform in Naturalization.

The gross abuses practiced chiefly in this City and State in the matter of naturalizing persons of foreign birth are, we trust, about to be stopped. The highest honor and privilege that a nation can confer upon a stranger is the investiture of citizenship. Hitherto, although Congress has had power over naturalization, the business has been practically left to the several States, whose real or apparent needs have guided their action, and produced a mass of conflicting laws that leave the whole matter in chaos. New-York, for instance, requires, according to the acts of Congress, a certain term of residence, and the declaration of intention a certain period before taking out final papers. Some of the Western States, anxious to induce immigration, confer all the privileges of citizenship after twelve months' residence, and dispense with declarations of intention. Thus a foreigner may become to a certain extent a citizen in one State, and yet be for years not a citizen in another.

What is most needed is due regard to the importance of the act of conferring citizenship, and that desirable reformation will probably be secured if the bill just introduced into Congress by Mr. JENCKES becomes a law. Its provisions are, briefly: Residence without interruption of four years and six months at the time of application; declaration of bona-fide intention; renunciation of foreign allegiance; resignation of any title of nobility; date and place of birth, also place of birth of parents; date of leaving his native country and of arrival here, at what port and in what vessel; description of the petitioner, embracing name, age, business, residence, height, complexion, color of eyes and hair, and any other distinguishing outward marks. He must have resided a year in the State where applying, have preserved a good moral character, be attached to the principles of the Constitution and well disposed toward the Government. The most important section declares that "the Circuit and District Courts of the United States shall have sole and exclusive jurisdiction of all applications of aliens to be admitted to become citizens under this act." Registers in bankruptcy are empowered to take testimony; but no State Court, power or authority can have anything to do with naturalization. The act also provides for careful and proper proof that the applicant has fulfilled the preliminary conditions, and is worthy of the privilege sought. Due provision is made for preserving testimony and recording the names of applicants. Supposing everything to be right, the Court grants the citizenship; but in order to prevent the rush just before election, when party spirit runs high, it is provided that the act of naturalizing shall be of no legal force until after the lapse of six months; at the expiration of that period the proper certificate shall be issued, and thus the work will be finished. This paper, which must be produced before the registrars and inspectors of election, will contain the description of the party, which will do away with the outrage of voting upon dead men's papers. Aliens who have served a year in our army may be naturalized without further residence, if honorably discharged. Children under age become citizens, as now, by the naturalization of the parent. No woman shall lose her citizenship because she is the wife of an alien. Once a month the Clerks of the United States Courts shall forward to the State Department a list of all persons naturalized.

These are the main provisions of a much-needed act. Other sections guard against fraud, and specify the manner of administering the law. The great feature is the taking of naturalization into the hands of the General Government. That will put an end to the New-York process of manufacturing citizens, and wipe out one of the worst disgraces of the time. No well-meaning man will object to any reasonable safeguard against the abuse of so high an act of authority as the making of a citizen. The opposition, if any there may be, to the general purport of Mr. JENCKES' bill, will come from those who care more for party success than for honesty; those who are always opposed to strict election laws and in favor of the largest liberty to do wrong.

Another example of the loose system of conducting business in banks is afforded in the defalcation reported to-day. The "Merchant's Exchange National Bank" has lost about $150,000 by the defalcation of the Cashier. Want of means or inadequate salary cannot be alleged as the incentive to the wrong, for the Cashier received the handsome sum of $10,000 a year. "Unlimited confidence was reposed in him"—generally a mistake in positions of that kind. There are other officials connected with a bank who ought to look thoroughly into the accounts from time to time. In this case large sums of money were lent by the Cashier to some relatives. He was deceived in his turn, but that is not sufficient to exculpate him. Fortunately the solvency of the bank is not affected by this loss, but no thanks are due to the managers. We can only hope that this warning will set other bank Presidents on the alert.

The moral we read yesterday on the subject of panics in theatres derives fresh point from the disaster we record this morning. At a theatre in Bristol, England, an alarm of some sort arose among the audience, and there was the usual great rush to the doors. The cause of the panic killed no one—but in the scramble to escape eighteen persons were killed and many injured. It always happens so. If people would only keep their seats they would be safe. Even when a fire has actually broken out, there would be time for every one to leave the building if they endeavored to preserve some order. The Bristol calamity ought to impress upon everybody's mind the lesson we have often urged, that in case of a sudden alarm in a crowded building, the safest thing to do is to keep your seats.

Russian baths are always to be regarded with suspicion. It is not likely that anybody uses them under the idea that they assist cleanliness, but if there is such a delusion in existence, the story published about a Russian bath in New-York is sufficient to dispel it. The statement is that the water used for the bath is not changed from Monday till Thursday in each week. People who have bathed on Monday have comparatively little to regret; but what must be the feelings of those who have been in the habit of going to the bath on Thursday morning, and who now hear the terrible secret about the water? They can never enjoy a moment's peace of mind again. The Board of Health are going to look into this dismal bath. It would have been better for the supporters of the establishment if they had done so long ago.

The World admits that in a Sunday article entitled "Into the Depths" it made a quotation which injures "a gentleman widely known and as widely esteemed." If the World is going to begin to apologize for its recent Sunday articles where will it stop? It will have to sit in sackcloth and ashes, and scrape itself with potsherds, for at least a twelvemonth to come. Repentance being one sign of grace, it ought at once to discard the contributor it unfortunately borrowed from an indecent publication, give up publishing obscenity and blasphemy as "graphic writing," and get back to its old "form" as fast as possible. It has been "Into the Depths" long enough—suppose it comes "out of the depths" now, and tries the fresh air again?

We are always hearing of outrages in street cars, but it is only by making them public that we can hope to gain the help of the Police. Yesterday evening, on the Fourth-avenue road, the following scene took place: four or five pickpockets jumped upon a crowded car, and began to lay out their plans of operation. Presently a passenger wished to get down. The conductor asked the gang to move aside. Ringleader declined. Conductor tried to push him out of the way, when heavy blows were at once aimed at him. The conductor retreated into the car, followed by the roughs, who struck him several times. The car was crowded with other men, not one of whom offered to interfere. The ruffians had everything their own way—and yet there was enough spare strength on the car to have annihilated them. Is all the courage monopolized by the pickpockets? No doubt it is a nasty thing to run the chance of a thrust from a knife or a shot from a pistol. But a sudden blow at these ruffians would disable them from further mischief, and it is better to run some risk than let the street cars be sacked by highwaymen. The conductors ought to get some support from honest passengers; they have no easy time of it at present.

There is a probability, or something more, that the long-talked-of race between Mr. J. G. BENNETT'S yacht, Dauntless, and Mr. ASHBURY'S Cambria, will take place next year. As everybody knows, it is not Mr. BENNETT'S fault that the match was not brought to an issue long ago. He has done all that lies in the power of one man to keep up the reputation of American yachtsmen for spirit, energy and pluck. But the terms of the race were hard to settle, and at one time it seemed most improbable that arrangements for the contest would ever be made. We are not in possession of full particulars on the subject, but we believe we shall be found correct in stating that the conditions will no longer present any difficulty. Mr. BENNETT has gained distinction enough as a yachtsman to last for one lifetime, and he could well afford to lose this race, but his perseverance and enterprise would alone lead us, in common with the public, to wish him success.

Apropos of the Temperance Mass Meeting: the speakers were at "the marriage of Cana in Galilee" again, though they might as well have let it alone. Rev. Mr. CATTELL was pretty loud on "lager," which certainly does for most people what "sighing and grief" did for Jack Faisaff—blows them up like bladders. Those temperance meetings do some good, and everything considered, there is no reason to despair of the cause of temperance—since the growing intelligence of the time is all in favor of it. A go-ahead people who must work with hand and brain cannot afford to muddle itself with liquor. Another good help of temperance is the poisoning of the beverages by the distillers and dealers. Sensible people are afraid of them; and this also is one of the benefits of chemistry. For the rest it is probable our "drinking" is mainly kept up by the foreign emigrants who cling to their over-sea traditions. But time and the common schools will, no doubt, give a good account of these.

The Board of Health has been doing the City a vast amount of excellent service—such indeed as tempts one to make one more allusion to the "Augean stable." It has removed a great number of old nuisances and frightened some others, and brought about a wonderful improvement in the economy of the tenement houses and cellars, those nurseries of our most dangerous diseases. Such a Board is a vital necessity, as one of the permanent City institutions; for experience shows that the people of large cities need an "eternal vigilance" to prevent them from poisoning one another in a variety of ways. Much has been done; but more remains to do, since London, on its flats beside the foul stream of the Thames, shows a less mortality rate than New-York, on its high ground washed by its waters on all sides. Our Board of modern Ædiles should be always kept up in a state of watchful and even arbitrary efficiency, as overseers of public buildings and sewers, and guardians of the public health.

AMUSEMENTS.

Herrmann's Farewell Performances.

HERRMANN, the most skillful of all prestidigitateurs who have yet appeared among us, is soon, we hear, to resign his conjuring rod to other hands, and to retire into private life, there to enjoy well-earned fame and fortune. His present performances at the Academy of Music will, therefore, in all probability, be his last in this City. Using no apparatus like other performers, but relying wholly upon manual skill and digital dexterity, his tricks are the more mistifying and incomprehensible. It would be impossible to say which of them is the best, for he introduces so many modifications of old ones and so many that are entirely novel, that every evening's programme may be said to be new. Last night, among his freshest achievements, were "The Indian Handkerchief," "The Devil's Hat," and "The Magic Basket." An audience that filled the Academy witnessed the whole performance. Mr. HERMANN appears to-night.

"The" Cardiff Giant.

Those of our readers whom a plenitude of giants has not wearied of their inspection, have now an opportunity of gazing upon the original giant, the story of whose discovery at Cardiff has appeared in print time and again. The genuine article, if we may apply that colloquial term to petrified mankind, is at present being exhibited at Apollo Hall, and to the continued wonderment of many visitors. We have already expressed an opinion as to the source whence all these giants flow, and do not care to recapitulate it now. We believe, however, that the man of gypsum at Apollo Hall is what may be called the artist's proof of the work, a reproduction of which only has been shown elsewhere. The sight-seer who follows the tide into the establishment we refer to, will behold quite an impressive sight. In the centre of an inclosed space the giant lies in state, surrounded by a railing, a ring of gas burners, a promenade circle, a raised balcony and an abundance of certificates as to his identity with the treasure trove. The effect of the exhibition is striking, at all events, and to the possessors of theories as to the antiquity of the giant, interesting in a high degree. So that a visit to Apollo Hall is worth making, after all. It can be paid, day or night, until further notice.

French Canadians in New-Hampshire.

From the Montreal Witness, Dec. 24.

A correspondent of Le Pays, writing from Concord, N. H., gives an account of visits paid by him to Manchester and Suncook, two towns of that State, and the social position of the numerous French Canadians settled there. Manchester is a handsome town of 35,000 inhabitants, of whom 3,000 are Canadians, although ten years ago there were but a dozen. The Canadians are well-to-do, and have property, and money in bank, as shown by a statement containing the names of sixty-seven of them, and the places in Canada from which they originally came. This statement shows amounts belonging to each individual varying from $8,000 to $300, in all $129,780, or an average of $2,000 each. A school taught by Mr. J. B. PAION, formerly of St. John, Quebec, is attended by 140 children of Canadians. At Suncook, eleven miles from Manchester, there are now about 600 Canadians. Five years ago there were only a score. It is also a manufacturing place, and Canadians are preferred as employes. A list is given here also of twenty-eight Canadians with bank accounts of from $15,000 to $500 each, in all $60,000, or an average of over $2,100 each. It would, therefore, appear that a goodly number of the French Canadians who have emigrated across the lines have found not only comfortable livelihoods, but even amassed wealth.

A Pony Express on the Arkansas Frontier.

From the Little Rock (Ark.) Gazette, Dec. 17.

Few persons are aware of the existence of extended and important lines of mail service west of us, by means of which the towns in the Indian country and frontier posts west are provided with regular mails. B. F. FICKLIN, an old mail contractor, originator of the celebrated "pony express," from St. Joseph, Mo., to Sacramento, Cal., is proprietor of a line from Fort Smith to Fort Concho, via Arbuckle, and from from Fort Concho to El Paso, and from San Antonio to Concho. The mail from Fort Smith to Sherman, Texas, is carried in four-horse post coaches two hundred miles in forty-eight hours, thence by two-horse hacks to Concho and El Paso, averaging one hundred miles, in twenty-four hours. Connected therewith is a branch route from Arbuckle to Fort Sill, in the Witchitah Mountain, one of the largest posts in the West, where are stationed eight companies of cavalry, and a rendezvous of 8,000 Indians, 300 miles from Fort Smith. The time is three days, in two-horse hacks. It is about 600 miles from Fort Smith to Consabo. Mr. FICKLIN is also proprietor of a line from Fort Smith to Keattaville, sixty miles south from Springfield, Mo., daily, in two-horse hacks. General FRANK C. ARMSTRONG is the energetic and competent agent of these lines north of the Texas boundary. West of Concho the road has to be protected by troops, which then are not always able to afford protection to drivers and stock.

MORE WHISKY FRAUDS.

Conspiracy of the Loeb Brothers to Defraud the Government.

Extensive Illicit Whisky Operations—Endeavors to Suppress the Facts and to Shield the Culprits—Their Indictment—Report of Their Escape to Europe by the United States Marshal.

Yesterday United States Marshal HARLOW reported to the District Attorney's office that CHARLES, AUGUSTUS and MASON LOEB, and THOMAS F. RAY, against whom bench warrants had issued for their arrest, could not be found in this City by his deputies, and that he had good reason for believing that they had all fled to Europe. Some particulars about the Loeb case are necessary in connection with the above announcement, in order to show the offence with which the defendants were charged, and the urgent need for their escaping abroad to avoid a stigma on their names, which are well known in high and fashionable social circles. Heretofore the official documents in the case have circulated around the District-Attorney's office without exciting the faintest suspicion on the part of the reporters that they contained evidence of an enormous conspiracy to defraud the Government, involving, it is believed, nearly $1,000,000. It is only now that the facts in the case are presented to the public, although the alleged offence was perpetrated several months ago. On the 10th of July last, S. B. DUTCHER, Superintendent of Internal Revenue, made a report to the District-Attorney, informing him that his subordinates had seized a large distillery, situated at the corner of Tenth-avenue and Thirty-third-street, on the ground that the owners had been detected in the act of manufacturing and selling spirits in an illicit manner. He said that a number of rubber pipes had been discovered underground in the distillery, and that they had their termination at a rectifying establishment at No. 511 West Thirty-third-street, a short distance off. He also expressed it as his belief that spirits in large quantities had been run through these pipes from the distillery to the rectifying establishment, and that they subsequently were covertly taken from the latter place and offered for sale, thus escaping internal revenue tax. At the time suspicion was first directed against the place, two revenue detectives were detailed to watch it, and to take note of everything that transpired. During their secret observations, which were carried on from the windows of a house on the opposite side of the street, they noticed that large quantities of molasses and grain and other raw material for manufacturing whisky, brought into the distillery, was vastly disproportionate to the meagre number of barrels of the manufactured fluid which were taken out. This discrepancy was reported to the proper officers, and an investigation followed, with the results stated above. No data were found at the time of the seizure by which could be determined the extent of the frauds or the exact period of their existence; but it afterward appeared that the illicit pipes had been in use for a considerable length of time. CHARLES, AUGUSTUS and MASON LOEB and THOMAS F. RAY were ascertained to be the proprietors of the place, the three first named being brothers. The LOEB BROTHERS, as they were called, were well known in Fifth-avenue society for the brilliancy and perfection of their manners and conversation, and for the wealth which they were reputed to enjoy in consequence of extensive speculations during the war. Two of the brothers established the Glenham Hotel on Fifth-avenue a few months ago, and attempted to open a rivalry with DELMONICO, but were ultimately obliged to sell out and abandon their enterprise, in order to leave for Europe. It is claimed on official authority, that after the capture of their distillery they were compelled to distribute bribes in a lavish manner in order to postpone action in their case. A libel was filed against the distillery in the United States District Court, and on the 3d of August following Mr. ROLLINS appeared as counsel for the claimants. No answer was made to the claim, however, and accordingly on the 12th of October last, Judge BLATCHFORD granted a decree of condemnation and a writ of sale in the case. The property was sold in December for $27,000. On the 17th of the same month a criminal indictment was found against all four defendants, and on the following day bench warrants for their arrest were issued. The Deputy Marshals then became aware that the accused had left for Europe some time before, they apparently having received some intimation of the fate which was likely to befall them if they stayed here.

Storms in the Sun.

Professor J. D. STEELE has communicated the following to the Elmira Advertiser:

"There appeared in the Advertiser some weeks since a paragraph, copied, I believe, from a Michigan paper, declaring that a column of magnetic light is shooting out from the sun at a prodigious speed—that it already reaches half way to the earth, and that, in all probability, by another Summer, we shall have celestial and atmospheric phenomena beside which our rudest Winter winds will seem like a 'June morning in Paradise.' In fine, that when this big tongue of fire touches the earth it will likely lap up our globe at one mouthful. Very many have made inquiries of me concerning this prodigy, and with your leave, I will try to satisfy their curiosity and perhaps allay their fears.

It has been known for some time that during a total eclipse red flames were seen to play about the edge of the moon. During the eclipses of 1868 and 1869 it was definitely settled that they were entirely disconnected with the moon, and were vast tongues of fire darting out from the sun's disc. By observations with the spectroscope, and also by means of the wonderful photographs of the sun taken by DE LA RUE during the eclipse of 1868, it was discovered that these fire mountains consisted mainly of burning hydrogen gas. This was precious information to secure in the midst of the excitement and novelty, and in the brief duration of a total eclipse. It did not, however, satisfy scientific men. For two years Mr. LOCKYER, aided by a grant from Parliament to construct a superior instrument, had been experimenting and searching in order to detect these flames at other times than at the rare occurrence of a total eclipse. On the 20th of October, 1868, he obtained a distinct image of one of the prominences, which he afterward traced entirely around the sun. Astronomers can, therefore, now study these flames at any time.

The result of observations now being taken show that storms rage upon the sun with a violence of which we can form no conception. Hurricanes swept over its surface with terrific violence. Vast cyclones wrap its fires into whirlpools, at the bottom of which our earth could lie like a boulder in a volcano. Huge flames dart out to enormous distances, and fly over the sun with a speed greater than that of the earth itself through space. At one time a cone of fire shot out 80,000 miles, and then died away all in ten minutes time. Besides such awful convulsions the mimic display of a terrestrial volcano or earthquake sinks into insignificance.

There is nothing in these phenomena to alarm us. They have, in all probability, happened constantly for ages past. That we have now means of investigating their nature and measuring their height and velocity, furnishes no cause of anxiety. Rumors of these discoveries have crept into the papers, and, exaggerated by repeated copying and sensational additions, have given rise to these mysterious and uncalled for predictions."

The Judiciary Article.

From the Troy Press, Dec. 28.

We learn that Hon. JACOB HARDENBURGH, Senator elect from the Fourteenth District, has drawn up a bill setting forth specifically the provisions of the Judiciary article, and pointing out the way in which they should be carried out. This bill Senator HARDENBURGH will introduce into the Senate, and it will probably pass. It is proper that these recommendations should come from Mr. HARDENBURGH, inasmuch as he was the father of the article in the Convention, and it was owing to his advocacy of it that it passed that body.

Two Young Men Killed by Carelessness.

Correspondence of the Davenport Democrat.

NEWTON, Iowa, Monday, Dec. 20, 1869.

Last night about 12 o'clock a most heartrending circumstance occurred in our city, whereby two young and promising boys, the only sons of a widowed mother, whose husband gave his life to our country's cause, is now doubly bereaved by the loss of her only stay and comfort. The circumstances of the case are briefly as follows:

Mr. CLEVELAND and wife have been on a visit to friends in this place, and were at the house of Mrs. ANNIS, awaiting the arrival of the express train from the West, due at 1:26 A. M. The family of Mrs. ANNIS, consisting of two boys, (her only daughter being East on a visit,) Mr. CLEVELAND and wife, and a young man, a school teacher, boarding at the house at the time. All present were enjoying themselves very pleasantly at the time, as they were soon to lose the society of their visitors. During the conversation, the topic of the manual of arms was discussed, and upon the boys expressing a wish to witness the evolutions, the school teacher took a carbine belonging to Mr. CLEVELAND and began with the manual. He had proceeded as far as "take aim, fire," when one of the boys gave the command to fire, when he thoughtlessly, or accidentally, let the hammer down full on the nipple of the gun, and, to the terror of that fated household, the piece was discharged, the ball going through the head of the youngest son, killing him instantly, and then striking the elder in the body, producing a mortal wound, as the eldest died about 10 o'clock this morning. It is stated that Mr. CLEVELAND was standing within a few feet of the gun, and it had a strange coincidence that the whole terrible calamity is the effect of carelessness.

THE ST. THOMAS TREATY.

[Translated from the Copenhagen Dagbladet of Dec. 6, 1869.]

The convention of Oct. 24, 1867, by which the King of Denmark agreed, after repeated and urgent solicitations on the part of the United States Government, to sell to the Union the Islands of St. Thomas and St. John for the sum of $7,500,000 in gold, ought, in accordance with its closing article, to have been mutually ratified in such good season as to admit of the exchange of ratifications at Washington on or before the 24th February, 1868. Although the subject was not submitted to the Danish Rigsdag until after the convention had been communicated to the American Senate, yet such prompt action was taken by that body, that Denmark was ready with her ratification in due season, while she had, in the meantime, complied with the requirements of article 1 regarding the vote to be taken on the islands themselves. On the part of the United States, however, nothing was done. The 24th of February passed without the Senate and its Committee deigning even to take the matter under consideration. It was not until the 15th of October following, nearly eight months after the term had expired, that an additional convention was concluded between Secretary SEWARD and the Danish Charge d'Affaires, Mr. BILLE. The eight months which had passed were entirely left out of the count, and a further extension given, covering one entire year from the date when the document was signed. That year too has passed without any result whatever, and now we find that a new additional convention has been concluded, bearing the signatures of Mr. HAMILTON FISH, the United States Secretary of State, and Mr. F. BILLE, the Danish Minister Resident, and extending the matter for another six months, or until April 14, 1870.

We cannot complain of any circumlocution in the explanation which is given of this further delay. "Circumstances have prevented a punctual compliance with that engagement;" those are the exact words, nothing more. But then we were sufficiently aware beforehand that the only "circumstance" which has blocked the way is the omission of the American Senate and the Committee of the Senate to give the question even that preliminary treatment which seems to us to be a matter of common duty, as well out of respect to the Executive power of the Union itself as out of regard to a foreign State, no matter how small that State may be.

We shall not, however, spend any time in guessing at what may be the final result of the matter. We shall not be willing, as long as it is possible, to place any reliance in those predictions which speak of an intention on the part of the United States to withdraw from a treaty which was called into existence solely by American initiatives, and after pressing requests from men whom Denmark was justified in regarding not as private individuals, but as representatives responsible to and acting in the name of the Union. We intend, as long as we are able, to continue to believe that the Senate will not begin to create a universal distrust toward all international transactions in which the United States shall appear as one of the parties. We are perfectly well acquainted with the efforts which are being made in order to secure to the Union, by some means or other, a harbor in the Bay of Samana, on the Island of San Domingo, and we are also aware that one of these semi-official and yet not responsible commissions, by which our own West India islands were visited, has recently been sent to San Domingo. During the month of August General BABCOCK, Senator COLE and Judge O'SULLIVAN were in that island, and probably agreed with President BAEZ upon some plan or other, which should be submitted to the Senate at the approaching meeting of Congress. It is not even improbable that the older plan of annexing the entire Republic of San Domingo may be reconsidered, and the London Times, in its remarkable delusion, has already congratulated the Union upon this new acquisition, and directed its attention to a similar acquisition of Hayti, Cuba and Porto Rico—why not Jamaica also? But we cannot discover that, in all these projects, even if they should succeed, there can be any reason, or even a decent pretence, for the Senate to reject a treaty which was concluded with the King of Denmark more than two years ago, on his part certainly in good faith. On the contrary, as the starry flag spreads itself more and more over the West Indian Archipelago, it stands in higher need than ever of St. Thomas and its superb harbor as a central point of incalculable importance.

In any event, we are now contenting ourselves with the firm expectation that the six months, extension which has just been agreed upon absolutely to be the last, and that the Danish Government has so informed the authorities at Washington. The matter can no longer be kept in its present undefined shape; it must now come to a decision. The dignity of the Crown and of the country does not permit that one session after another shall pass in this way without the slightest action being taken, for it would ultimately appear as if Denmark were begging a favor of the Union, when the honest truth is that Denmark has only complied with America's own request. The Danish West India Islands have already suffered sensibly during the long and painful uncertainty that followed upon the vote which was taken two years ago under the strong influence of American promises; and their material interests, no less than their moral feelings, require that it should be made clear to them, without any further delay, to whom they really belong. Finally, the decision is of importance to our own domestic affairs. The undefined position of the North American question exerts a most unfortunate influence upon our Ministry, which, while on the one hand it is bound to await a solution, on the other hand is constantly embarrassed in its sphere of action and its future plans, by having constantly to consider an eventuality which may terminate its existence at any moment. The settlement of this question has gradually, by the force of circumstances, become almost a turning point in our domestic affairs, a starting point of plans and fancies; but like the Greek calendars, it has steadily receded. It is, therefore, equally necessary, with regard to our own domestic relations, that this matter shall come to an end. We believe that the limit which has been fixed upon in the last agreement may be taken as an evidence that such, also, are the views of our own Government. If we mistake not, it is just about this time that Congress assembles; and there will consequently be ample time between now and the 14th of April for the Senate to arrive at a decision.

THE DISASTER IN GREENE, R. I.

From the Providence Journal, Dec. 28.

The inhabitants of Greene Station and vicinity, on the Hartford, Providence and Fishkill Railroad, assembled together on the evening of Friday, the 24th, for the purpose of enjoying one of those merry-making Christmas times, which brings joy and gladness to the hearts of the old as well as to the young. About 250 gathered in a building, 34x30, which was in process of erection by Mr. CHAS. J. BORDEN, to be used as a dry goods and grocery store. The work had been hurried up with all possible dispatch, and was barely made comfortable for this occasion. This building was of two stories, and at this time the upper floor was permanently laid, while the lower one was covered with loose and temporary boards. The upper floor was supported in the centre by a green, round white oak shore, a little more than three inches in diameter at the top and five inches at the bottom. Another shore supported the ground floor in the cellar. The attention of those who were supposed to be Santa Claus had called to these supports, and they were deemed sufficient to withstand any pressure which might be brought to bear on them.

The festivities of the evening had been progressing with remarkable zest and good feeling, and were nearly concluded, when it was announced that Santa Claus had arrived in force, and was on hand. All but two or three hurried from the lower to the upper floor to receive this distinguished personage. Santa Claus had unshipped his ponderous knapsack, and was about to commence the momentous work before him. All were crowding up to get a sight at the manœuvres and share in the fun. At that moment there was a crackling in the hall, a tremble of the floor, and the centre began to settle with a rush; down it was hurled against the lower floor, which in turn gave way, and timbers, benches, boards, candles, kerosene lamps, and all that joyous, happy assemblage of men, women and children, were in a moment piled up in the cellar below in inextricable confusion. The wild cry which arose in the going down, and the heartrending cries and screams from the ruins, would have appalled the stoutest heart. But this was of short duration. Strong arms and brave hearts were there. Never were men more cool and self-possessed. Some got out as best they could, and big bodies were torn out of the high underpinning by them, and those within seized upon, extricated and passed out the sufferers with careful tenderness. Others hauled them up on to a piece of the floor which had not given way, and others were lifted up and taken out of the windows. By the indomitable exertions of citizens, in less than half an hour every human being was delivered. During the time there was a wild excitement outside. Fathers and mothers looking after their children, husbands for their wives, children for their parents, expecting every moment that some one of them would come out crushed, mangled or dead. And when it became known that every one who was buried into that fearful abyss was safe in the land of the living, a heartfelt shout of thanksgiving went up to God. Almost every one who experienced this casualty was more or less injured, but no one will probably die. Mrs. ALBERT BROWN had a leg broken; Mrs. STEPHEN WILCOX had her knee crushed; a grandson of O. G. WATERMAN had his arm broken; Mrs. ASA AUSTIN had her spine severely injured, but not broken, and a Mr. HUMES came near bleeding to death from the rupture of a posterior nasal artery. Altogether, this was a most remarkable escape of many from destruction. The stoves remained on a bit of floor which did not go down with the wreck. Had these been buried down among the shavings and other combustibles of the cellar, saturated with kerosene oil, half of this imprisoned mass of men must have been burned to death.

LIFE INSURANCE.

The Premium Rates, and the Risks Incurred—The Peril of Life Insurance Companies.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Your recent article on life insurance and the increase of rates on some classes of policies is certainly timely. One of two things must be true, either the rates for those classes have heretofore been too low, and consequently the dividends promised and paid—though promised and paid are not always the same thing—were not earned, or else the increase is uncalled for. My own impression, after considerable examination and inquiry, is that the raising of the rates is necessary to secure continued safety. This ought not to be the case, but it is so, I fear. The truth is, that the results which have been obtained by our older companies, the past few years, showed that the rate of premiums taken by them upon the class of lives insured by them were so high that they earned and could pay large dividends. But the condition of things has, I fear, now changed. Rates have not hitherto increased; indeed, through various allowances, they have somewhat decreased. Expenses, too, have increased. But the great trouble is that the Companies do not now get the class of lives the older Companies did. When one particular Company first started for instance, it was very rarely that it was led to insure any one whose chance of life was not fully up to the average for which the Company's table of rates was calculated. In other words, it was a safe mathematical calculation to say that taking a thousand such lives as it then insured, the Company would receive from them in annual premiums and in interest thereon as much as it agreed to pay out. Experience has shown that it received a good deal more. But I greatly fear that the condition of things is different now. What with the competition for business among the increasing Companies and the devices of designing persons, I believe that with any thousand lives insured within two years past—not to go further back—the probabilities are that the Companies insuring them will receive in annual premiums and interest much less than they have agreed to pay. This is, of course, only a matter of opinion, for it can be nothing else. We must wait fifteen, twenty or thirty years before we can learn certainly whether the opinion is correct, for only then can we ascertain what the rate of mortality has been among those thus recently insured. But there are some facts on which an opinion can be based. I think there is no person who has paid any attention to the subject who cannot of his own knowledge point out persons who have been insured within a few years, whom he knows to have been at the time in impaired health, and not to have been safe subjects for insurance at ordinary rates. I know of my own knowledge a case where I was so impressed with the fact that a man with whom I was doing business could not live long, that I refused to give him more than a very brief credit. He died in less than a year after that time, and not of any acute or sudden disease. After his death it appeared that within that year about $60,000 of insurance had been obtained on his life, much of it in our best Companies. In this case, too, the man resided in the City, where there was, of course, no difficulty in procuring reliable medical examination, which is not always to be had in the country. Within three months a medical gentleman interested in life insurance mentioned to me that he had incurred some odium because he had warned a company against taking a risk on the life of a neighbor, an ex-official of a neighboring county. On my asking him the reason why he took this course, he told me that he believed the man was incurably diseased, and could not live a year. The insured died in less than six weeks after this conversation, and it then appeared that there were $50,000 of insurance upon his life, $30,000 of which had been obtained since last Spring. A prominent State officer, who has been for years insured in the oldest Company in this country, told me recently that he for the first time felt a doubt when he found, a few weeks since, that a townsman of his, who he and every one else believed to be far gone in consumption, had recently secured a large amount of insurance—$30,000 or $40,000, I think—part of it in the Company in which he was himself insured. He added that this reminded him that within two years another man whom he at the time believed could not live many years, also procured a considerable insurance, and that this insured had already survived longer than he than thought he would.

The doubts suggested by these instances, occurring almost within my personal knowledge, are confirmed by some statistics which I find in the Massachusetts Insurance Reports, though I have looked in vain for similar information in the reports of your own Insurance Department. The Massachusetts Insurance Commissioner has for two or three years published a statement of the number and proportion of those insured in each Company who have died after having paid only one or two premiums. The value and suggestiveness of such a table is obvious. The annual premiums charged by our companies are based upon the calculation, which is true as to sound lives, that of a thousand persons insured at a given age, the average remainder of life of each person will amount to a given number of years. Thus, persons aged thirty are insured on the theory that their future lives will average about thirty-three years each. Some of course will live fewer years while others will keep up the average by living more. If this calculation is not correct, then the Company agrees to pay out more than it will receive, and so makes a bad bargain. Now, the table I have referred to shows an alarming proportion of persons who die within twelve months after being insured, and who have, of course, paid only one premium, and who take from the Company much more than they have paid in. The same is true as to deaths within two years after insurance.

I do not mean to be an alarmist. I believe our insurance companies are yet sound, but I believe they must exercise a greater care than they now do in the selection of lives to be insured or they will not long continue sound. Such a table as the Massachusetts Commissioner gives, continued and amplified, would furnish us a tolerable test, would be in a measure like the sounding lead to the navigator. I want our Insurance Commissioner require our companies to report how many persons have died within each of the last five years, after having paid but one premium, how many after two payments, and so on up to ten payments. Let them also be required to state the aggregate amount of net premiums and interest thereon received from each person so dying, and the amount insured in each such policy, together with the aggregate of net premiums and insurance in each such year, and we should get more real valuable information than in all the tables now published. Let him, then, go further, and require the Companies to state, as far as known, the causes of death in each such case, and we should then be able to form some opinion as to how large a proportion of these deaths occurred from diseases which ought to have been foreseen at the time of insurance.

To prevent misconception of my views, I may add that in what I have said I must not be understood as contending that only persons in good health should be insured. What I do mean is that only such persons should be insured at ordinary rates. If a person is in impaired health, or for any cause has not as good a prospect of life as the average, let him pay a higher rate, just as in fire insurance a hazardous risk costs more. If premium enough is paid, one risk is as safe for the Companies as another. B.

A Remarkable Case of Stabbing—A Knife Plunged to the Hilt Through a Man's Temple—It Takes the Full Strength of Five Men to Extract It—The Wounded Man Laughs and Jokes Under the Operation.

From the Cincinnati Gazette, Dec. 27.

A row, and remarkable case of stabbing, took place Christmas, at 7 o'clock in the evening, on Broadway, near Eighth-street. JERRY HOGAN was found lying there, with a knife buried to the hilt in his left temple. He was unable to speak, and was thought to be dying. Restoratives revived him, and he was taken to the Cincinnati Hospital. Here he was unusually facetious in his talk. "Doctor," he said, "I guess I'm a dead man." "You're worth two dead men," replied the doctor. "Well," said he, "I ain't fit to die. I'm too big a sinner."

While the surgeons were preparing to extract the knife he kept opening and shutting the part which stuck out of his head. "I just want to see how it feels. It don't hurt a bit, but seems like I had two heads. Well, an Irishman is hard to kill. We're a tough set. Life sticks to us mighty close."

When the surgeons got ready for work and found it impossible to extract the blade by hand, they laid the man on a couch upon the floor, and with the left side of his head uppermost. Three men with might and main held his head down. The engineer brought his pipe tongs in to grasp the hilt of the knife. This gave a sort of augur handle for the surgeon and engineer to pull by. All things ready, the surgeon and engineer took hold each with both hands, and tugging steadily with all their power, against three pairs of hands holding the head down, the knife came out with a jerk, thanks to a rivet of good true steel. HOGAN bore it without flinching, exclaiming when the feat was accomplished, "Now my two heads have come together and it feels good."

The weapon was a common two-bladed pocket-knife, the blade used well worn. It penetrated two and a half inches. The optic nerve is not injured. It is thought that HOGAN is in no danger—that, on the contrary, he will recover without difficulty. How the affair took place, why and who drove that knife through HOGAN'S skull, is a secret locked in his chest. This much he reveals: He was drinking and carousing all Christmas day in a party. In the evening the party were in a forenoon mood. Wrath mingled in the discussion. The logic of cold steel and mighty muscle cut short the debate, closed it, and broke up the assembly. Drs. RITCHIE and VINNEDGE officiated in extracting the knife and dressing the wound.

DENIED A GRAVE

From the Pittsburg (Penn.) Gazette, Dec. 27.

Several days ago we published in these columns the sickening details of the execution by the Sheriff of Butler County, under the provisions of a law which disgraces the statute book of an intelligent and progressive Commonwealth, of one ZACHARIAH TAYLOR HOCKENBERRY, convicted of the heinous crime of slaying his cousin, the object of his heart's affection. We thought that that chapter would end the terrible volume of sin, inhumation and wickedness. But not so. When the cold and rigid corpse was cut down, and after it had been recklessly exposed to the inspection of hundreds of morbid beings who crowded about the jail to glean the particulars of a too secret vindication of the law, the question of a Christian burial occurred. There were friends present who demanded and received the lifeless remains of the murderer, and hustled in a rude and tawdry coffin, they were driven with a brisk and careless trot to the Prospect burial ground. Here, just as the corpse was about to be lowered to a last and final resting-place, a posse of sepulchered Christians, men who had not a shadow of charity in their souls, made their appearance, and in a mock spirit of holy horror demurred, objected and positively refused to permit the remains of the cold-blooded and unfortunate murderer to repose beneath the shade of the cypress trees of Prospect. These good yeomen wanted no bad company when they arose on the grand day of final consummation.

The corpse was then again crowded into the rude country hearse, and with a still brisker trot the ride to the next burial place was made. St. Clair Cemetery, a small though enchanting village of the dead, was the objective point. Thither, over rough roads, the hearse hurried. The terrestrial guardian of the deceased owned a lot in the ground, and he defied all powers to keep him from depositing therein the remains of his unfortunate dead client. The grave was dug. The sexton was there with the necessary straps to lower the coffin, and the spade to hurl earth upon earth and forever hide decaying mortality. The solemn prayer had been uttered and the murderer's bones were about to be lowered, when gray-haired and venerable trustees appeared and out of their hallowed mouths proclaimed that the murderer's bones must rest elsewhere. They refused to listen to reason. They had made up their verdict, and the guilty, blood-stained murderer of his fair and pretty cousin, though cold and powerless in death, was blankly refused a place to sleep the sleep of death in the secluded churchyard of St. Clair. Again the rude coffin was lifted, and with more impatience than tenderness was thrust into the hearse, and again the horses were whipped into a lively trot. The day had waned and night was about the driver and his attendants, as a quiet and lonely spot in the dreary wilderness outskirting the pretty town of Butler was reached, and, in the light of the pale moon, a trench two feet deep and six feet long was thrown up and the body of ZACHARIAH TAYLOR HOCKENBERRY was solemnly deposited. The tall trees waved and moaned a requiem and the overtasked undertaker heaved a sigh as he stuck a fragment of wood over the grave to mark the spot, and leaped into the box with the irate driver, and rubbing his hands expressed his thanks that the murderer had at last found a place to rest his head in death.

But others were not content to leave him to enjoy the solitude of death. A rumor has it, a young physician of the city got word of the negligent burial, and, with a professional ardor quite refreshing, he reported the fact to his brother limbs; and, inasmuch as the dissecting room was barren a good healthy subject since FRICKE died on the gallows, an excursion was at once arranged to the woods near Butler. Lamps, picks and shovels in the hands of a quartet of fearless students were the results of a prolonged dead-room discussion. At Freeport these gallant enthusiasts of science procured a light two-horse wagon, and set forth to secure the prize. The spot was reached just as the shadow of night was setting, and a few vigorous efforts exposed, in all its wierdness, the coffin of the deceased. Quick as thought it was robbed of its contents. The stiff, muscular body of the recent victim of a cruel law was snatched and crowded into a bag, in which many a corpse had previously found place. Homeward came the party as fast as the spanking team could bring them. At Freeport they had to await a train, and the dead bag attracted some little attention, which was diverted by the boldest of the grave robbers assuring the curious that it contained nothing but potatoes. As potatoes it was entered on the train, but, fearful of discovery, the ring-leader of the excursionists rode to Allegheny in the baggage car, astride the corpse.

In an old, dilapidated-looking building, with green shutters that have not admitted a ray of light to the interior for a full decade of years, a building that is gorged from cellar to attic with dry bones and human skulls, the mortal remains of the executed murderer found place. The keen knife of science made quick work of the corpse, and the hideous, grinning, fleshless skull sits in place on the table of one of our prominent physicians, who points to it and says to his visitors, "if you would know thyself measure that with your own head." HOCKENBERRY on earth means nothing now. His boiled and bleached bones may rattle a moral in the dissecting room, but his grossly-violated grave will not speak for the sins and faults and misdeeds of the corpse once permitted to rest thereunder. Science has captured the murderer in death, and may be living profit from the knowledge derived at the point of the too-ready dissecting knife, which makes no distinction between old or young, rich or poor, wicked or good.

From the Cleveland (Ohio) Herald, Dec. 27.

On Thursday last JOHN SUTTER, 46 years of age, who lived on Commercial-street, was buried in Woodland Cemetery. The "resurrectionists" having been quite troublesome of late, the sexton placed a private mark upon the grave, to enable him to detect any disturbance by the ravagers. On Friday morning an examination of the grave revealed the fact that it had been visited during the night. The mound of earth had been carefully replaced, not differing in appearance from that made by the sexton's spade, except that the mark had disappeared; the sexton immediately caused the grave to be opened. No sooner was the coffin reached than the work of the despoilers was apparent. The cover had been broken open, evidently without lifting the coffin to the surface, and the corpse removed. The latter had been divested of its clothing, all the articles of which were thrown back into the coffin. This was doubtless done to prevent the garments from serving to assist in identification, in case a search should be made for the body.

Information was given to the authorities and on Saturday about noon, Sergeant MADIGAN and Detective MUNCLE, armed with a warrant, made a careful search of the Medical Colleges, and of the Hospital on the Heights, without, however, finding any trace of the missing body. Other "subjects" for the scalpel of the medical student were found, but the one they sought was either carefully concealed, or what is more likely, had been shipped to some other city.

The Swords of General Twiggs.

As the readers of the TIMES are already aware, a suit has been commenced against BENJAMIN F. BUTLER, in the Superior Court, for the recovery of the possession of the "Twigg Swords." It appears that subsequent to the commencement of the action, an order was obtained for the examination of the defendant, and he being advised by his counsel that an appearance was not necessary, disregarded the order. A motion is now made on behalf of the plaintiff to punish General BUTLER for contempt in having disobeyed the order for examination. The motion was opposed, on the ground that under the act of Congress, a petition having been filed to remove the trial of the cause to the Circuit Court of the United States, all proceedings in the State Court had ceased; decision reserved.

Jeff. Davis in Alabama—He is Moved to Tears by an Affecting Incident.

From the Huntsville (Ala.) Democrat, Dec. 18.

Ex-President DAVIS, the distinguished and honored representative of the "Lost Cause," came up from Memphis on the train which reached here at 1:30 P. M. to-day. He was on his way to visit Hon. C. C. CLAY, Jr., at his plantation (where he now resides) near Gurleysville, twenty miles east of Huntsville. It is hoped that he will find it convenient, before his return to Memphis, to visit our city, where he will be sure to receive a hearty welcome.

A gentleman who was on the train with Mr. DAVIS informs us that, on approaching Gurleysville, he walked up to the ex-President and asked, "Is this Mister JEFFERSON DAVIS?" "Yes, Madam," he replied. "Well, Sir, I lost my husband in the cause which you espoused, and" (giving him a hearty shake of the hand, with the tears trickling down her cheeks) "I feel just like I was meeting with my father." She gave the name of her deceased husband, and Mr. DAVIS recollected him as the gallant Major of a Confederate battery. She said she had been broken up by WILSON'S raid, and was now trying to get back with her children to her old home in Georgia. The ex-President and other gentlemen were moved to tears by the affecting incident, and contributed money to help her on her way.

MURDER IN BROOKLYN.

A Night Watchman Shot and Killed While on Duty—The Assassin Still at Large.

THOMAS HAYS, a night watchman at HARBECK'S stores, Furman-street, foot of Montague, was shot in the right breast about 6:30 o'clock last evening, and died on entering the City Hospital. He was observed staggering along Furman-street by the driver and conductor of an Atlantic-avenue car, who went to his aid and found that he was in a dying condition. They conveyed him to the Forty-second Precinct Station House, and thence he was taken to the City Hospital. He made a statement to the effect that while watching on the dock adjoining the stores he saw a man named EDWARD PERRY prowling around, and followed him through an alley toward Furman-street, when PERRY turned and fired at him, hitting him in the breast, and then immediately ran along Furman-street toward Atlantic-street.

PERRY is a junk dealer, having a shop under one of the arches of the Wallabout Ferry, and it is not known what object he had in view while hanging around the stock. His house, No. 152 Furman-street, was searched, but he could not be found. A policeman on duty at the South Ferry is said to have seen him going over to New-York, but not knowing anything about the shooting, he did not arrest him. MR. HAYS resided at No. 253 North Second-street, Williamsburg, is about 30 years of age, and leaves a family.

Arrest of a Man for the Murder of His Aged Mother.

On Saturday, the 18th inst., MICHAEL MEAD, aged 40, of No. 14 Baxter-street, quarreled with his mother, MARGARET MEAD, aged 80, and kicked and beat her in a most brutal manner. Mr. GEO. KELLOCK, the Superintendent of the Outdoor Poor, sent the old woman to Bellevue Hospital, on the representations of her son, who stated that she was sick and destitute. Mrs. MEAD died on the 27th inst., when the real facts were ascertained. MICHAEL disappeared on hearing of his mother's death, and was not discovered until yesterday, when the Sixth Ward Police arrested him in a neighboring tenement house. He was locked up at the Franklin-street Police Station to await the action of Coroner FLYNN, who will investigate the case to-day.

To the Public.

Having seen in the Commercial Advertiser of this evening a very inaccurate statement of my knowledge of the transactions of Mr. OAKLEY, the Cashier of the Merchants' Exchange Bank, I deem it necessary to state that a full examination is now being had by a Committee of the Board of Directors. The Government Examiner is now also engaged in investigating the affairs of the bank, and I confidently rely upon such examinations to show that I am wholly blameless in the matter.

Any statement of intimation to the contrary, I pronounce wholly incorrect, without any foundation in fact.

FIRST MORTGAGE CONVERTIBLE SINKING FUND SEVEN PER CENT. GOLD BONDS

OF THE

Danville, Urbana, Bloomington and Pekin Railroad Company

OF ILLINOIS,

PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST PAYABLE IN GOLD AT THE FARMERS' LOAN AND TRUST COMPANY, NEW-YORK. COUPONS PAYABLE APRIL AND OCTOBER 1.

FREE OF GOVERNMENT TAX.

THESE BONDS CAN BE REGISTERED.

CAPITAL STOCK ..... $3,000,000.
TOTAL ISSUE OF BONDS ..... $2,000,000.

Length of road, 117 5-100 miles. The bonds are limited to less than $18,000 per mile, and are secured by a First Mortgage on the entire property of the Company, which cost about $40,000 per mile, and which, we can say with the utmost confidence, will be worth soon after the completion of the road at least double its cost. The consolidation of this line with the Indianapolis, Crawfordsville and Danville Road, places over two hundred miles under one management, and furnishes still further security to the bondholders, these bonds having been assumed (a virtual guarantee) by the consolidated Company, under the name of the Indianapolis, Bloomington and Western Railroad Company. This is an east and west road, connecting with direct lines to Boston, New-York, Philadelphia and Baltimore on the east, and with the Pacific and other roads on the west. It runs through the richest and most populous district of Illinois, the local business of which will be more than sufficient to sustain it, while the through business (which will be limited only by the capacity of the road) must make it one of the best-paying railways in the country.

TWENTY-TWO MILES ONLY REMAIN UNFINISHED.

The work is being pushed radidly forward, and TRAINS WILL BE RUNNING OVER THE ENTIRE LINE DURING THE ENSUING MONTH.

About three-quarters of the Loan has been taken by actual investors. We continue to offer, for the present, the balance at 95 and accrued interest in currency.

The high premiums which the stock of all the East and West roads in Illinois command is justify the belief that the stock of this road will also soon sell above par, thus making the convertible clause of the Bond a valuable option.

All marketable securities received in exchange at the highest market rates. Bonds forwarded by express free of charge. Pamphlets containing full particulars furnished on application by the undersigned financial agents of the Company,

Sealed proposals, in duplicate, will be received at this office until 12 M.

THURSDAY, Jan. 27, 1870,

for completing the excavation of the prism, and the construction of the embankment wall of the canal for the improvement of the Des Moines Rapids of the Mississippi River.

The canal is to be about 7½ miles long, extending from Nashville, Iowa, to Keokuk, Iowa. The width at the water surface, inside the canal, is to be from 300 to 400 feet in embankment, and 250 feet in excavation and in low water to be five feet deep. All the material excavated from the prism of the canal to be used in building the embankment. The latter, throughout the greater part of the distance, will be about 300 feet from the Iowa shore. Where rock excavation occurs from the bottom of the canal, it will have a slope of 1¼ inches to the mile. The embankment to be built of earth, clay and rock; to be ten feet wide on top, including the rip-rap covering, and to be two feet above high-water mark, with slopes of 1¼ base to 1 vertical on the outside, and 1¼ base to 1 vertical on the inside. The average thickness of the rip-rap protection to be 3½ feet on the outside, 2 feet on the inside, and 1 foot on top.

A portion of the above has already been constructed—say three-fifths—the balance, or as much thereof as may be provided for by appropriations hereafter to be made, is to be let.

There shall be no interregnum between the completion of the present contract and the commencement of work under the new letting, except from want of funds.

All propositions must state the price at which each and every kind of work specified in the proposals is to be done, and no bid will be considered that is not definite in this respect.

A printed copy of this advertisement must be attached to each proposal.

Each bid must contain a written or printed guaranty signed by two responsible persons.

Blanks for proposals of the form required, with form of guaranty and exhibits of labor, will be furnished upon application at this office.

The price or prices in the contract will be considered as including the expense of furnishing all the material, (excepting the rights of way and borrow pits,) implements and machinery, and performing the work according to the plans and specifications exhibited at the letting.

The Government reserves the right to reject any and all bids not considered satisfactory.

Fifteen per cent. of the amount of any work done or materials furnished, at the contract price thereof, will be reserved until the entire work, which is the subject of contract, shall be entirely completed.

The name or names of the persons proposing must be written out in full, with their place of residence and Post Office address.

Plans, maps, specifications and all necessary papers will be ready for examination at this office fifteen days prior to the day of the letting.

THE LATEST THING IN HATS.—For compliments between gentlemen, hats are very appropriate, and always acceptable. KNOX, No. 212 Broadway, leads in this line, and he is so well known that we can add nothing to his reputation. We quote from a popular song:

Men save their money and their time—
And that's a weighty matter—
When trading in the hatter's line,
By knowing "KNOX," the hatter.
